City approves Royal facelift

Prince Charles and Duke of Edinburgh solemnly follow coffin of Earl Mountbatten as horse 'Dolly' leads procession to Westminster Abbey

By NORMAN GIDNEY
Times Staff

Victoria aldermen Tuesday endorsed a report to restore the Royal Theatre — long the neglected orphan of the local cultural scene — as a top rank civic auditorium and centre for the performing arts.

The report calls for spending $2.3 million to restore and re-equip the original 1913 building and add extensions backstage and on the east side.

Ald. Ron McKenzie, the city's representative on the tri-municipal committee which runs the Royal, said financing remains to be arranged, but Westcoast Savings Credit Union has offered in writing to contribute and there are indications from Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis of substantial funding, perhaps 50 per cent.

The province helped out in the original 1975 purchase of the Royal from Famous Players with a one-third grant towards the $250,000 cost and has contributed towards the $1.8 million in neccessary basic repairs carried out since.

The report, written by local theatre figure Allan Purdy, requires approval from the other two owners, Oak Bay and Saanich.

But McKenzie said Oak Bay is very favorable and Saanich representative Ald. Howard Sturrock has endorsed the report 100 per cent.

"The Royal would become a major arts facility in western Canada," said Purdy.

Locally, it would take up the slack between the city-owned McPherson and the 1,300-seat University Centre.

The major recommendation is for a $750,000 glass-fronted, two-storey entrance foyer set back from the sidewalk on the parking lot east of the Royal, which the city bought last March. It would contain improved bar facilities and a larger lobby to handle capacity crowds in the 1,500-seat theatre.

The new foyer would also contain washrooms and cloakrooms and areas for community use such as receptions, public meetings, entertainment and so on, said McKenzie.

If the plan goes ahead, a 40-foot extension would be added at the back of the theatre on another city-owned parking lot at a cost of $200,000 for truck loading, scenery storage and workshops.

Some $400,000 would also be spent on further repairs to the roof, outside walls and the badly damaged terra cotta decoration on the front of the theatre.

Another $620,000 would pay for new lighting, a better sound system, new stage equipment and the furniture, fixtures and fittings necessary to service a refurbished building.

Purdy also strongly suggested the termination of Famous Players' lease to use the Royal as a movie house 301 days a year.

"An energetic and enlightened management could easily replace the lost income with new bookings that would substantially increase revenue," he said.

Boutiques and offices should be built along the west side of the theatre on Blanshard Street, with the revenue subsidizing theatre operations, said Purdy.

He also countered criticisms that what the capital region really needs is a good 2,500-seat auditorium, which is 1,000 more than the Royal. Purdy said such a hall would cost $11-$15 million to build and would create an operating deficit of $200,000 to $300,000 a year.

A renovated Royal could be self-financing.

And research indicates there are no more than a dozen travelling shows which now pass up Victoria because the city has no large hall.

To attract these events which now play Vancouver and Seattle, it was suggested that the Royal subsidize the needed $40,000 or $50,000 a year to make up the minimum gate proceeds.

'Lord Louis' buried as world mourns

Times News Services

LONDON — Earl Mountbatten of Burma, hero of one war and victim of another, was buried today as he planned it — among the pageantry he loved in a London filled with the saddest crowds since the death of Winston Churchill.

Queen Elizabeth, ashen-faced and dressed in black, led the assembly of royalty paying its last respects to Mountbatten, the World War II naval hero and statesman killed by an IRA bomb aboard his boat 10 days ago.

Although it was not the joyous occasion that Mountbatten once said he wanted his funeral to be, the spectacular procession from St. James Palace to Westminster Abbey was just the way the 79-year-old earl planned it in a spoken obituary recorded two years ago.

Many thousands lined the route from the palace, where the coffin rested overnight, to the abbey, where Mountbatten's cousin Queen Elizabeth and his nephew Prince Philip led a dazzling gathering of six kings, three queens and many princes and princesses in paying final respects to Britain's beloved "Lord Louis."

On the theory that Mountbatten's Irish Republican Army assassins would stop at nothing, Scotland Yard turned the centre of London into an armed camp.

Some 4,000 police, armed detectives and terrorist specialists searched sewers, parked cars and buildings overlooking the funeral route. Sharpshooters on rooftops scanned the scene through binoculars.

Not since Sir Winston Churchill's funeral 14 years ago has Britain mounted a funeral of such magnificence.

In mid-morning of a lovely September day, hundreds of tall guardsmen, in crimson jackets and bearskin hats, began to line the streets. With a blare of trumpets and a ruffle of drums, the coffin was carried from the old red brick palace of King

U.S. slams Soviets in Cuba

WASHINGTON (CP) — State Secretary Cyrus Vance said today the United States cannot tolerate the continued presence in Cuba of a Soviet combat brigade.

"We regard this (the Soviet presence) as a very serious matter, affecting our relations with the Soviet Union," Vance told a news conference. "The presence of this unit runs counter to long-held American policies."

Responding to questions, he added: "I will not be satisfied with the maintenance of the status quo."

Vance did not rule out the possibility that the situation might influence Senate action on the strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union.

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold leaped $4.50 to a record $329.25 an ounce in London today. The U.S. dollar was narrowly mixed in trading against other major currencies.

Coffee prices rise

TORONTO (CP) — Coffee prices are going up for the fourth time in three months.

General Foods Ltd. announced Tuesday increases in the wholesale price of regular coffee by 25 cents a pound and instant coffee by 2.7 cents an ounce.

This rise brings the increase since June 6 to 75 cents a pound but the worst may be yet to come. Industry spokesman say frost damage in May reduced Brazil's expected 1980-81 coffee harvest by 23 per cent.

Frank Drea, Ontario minister of consumer and commercial relations, said the impact of the Brazilian frost won't be fully realized until next year.

The increase likely will be absorbed by restaurants for a while but retail stores can be expected to pass the increase on to customers.

"The increase would probably have to be passed on to the consumer, I really can't see any other way," said Allister Graham, general manager of the Oshawa Group's Ontario Food division.

$30,000-worth of ply stolen at Saanich lot

Saanich police are investigating the theft of about $30,000 worth of plywood from the Home Lumber yard at 470 Ardersier over the long weekend.

A police spokesman said today 30 bound bundles each consisting of between 40 to 80 sheets of select five-eights inch and three-quarter inch plywood were taken.

The theft occurred sometime between noon Saturday and Tuesday morning when lumber yard employees arrived back at work. A wire-mesh gate leading into the yard had been smashed open.

Police said a company fork lift was used to load the plywood onto a stolen 1975 Ford flatdeck truck.

The truck, with a yellow cab and marked Pacific Coast Roofing Ltd. on both doors, had been stolen from the roofing company's lot at 411 Hillside over the weekend. It was recovered in Saanich Tuesday morning.

Police said the truck could only carry about four bundles at a time and the thieves would have had to make at least seven trips into the yard.

Anyone who might have seen the truck over the weekend is asked to contract Sgt. Frank Briers or Sgt. Les Hughes of the Saanich police detectives branch at 388-4321.

Tuna trial Nov. 20

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tuna confiscated from nine American fish boats has been sold but the buyer hasn't decided yet what to do with it.

Meanwhile, the captains of the 11 American tuna boats seized last week southeast of the Queen Charlotte Islands appeared in Vancouver provincial court.

They were remanded to Nov. 20 for trial on charges of illegal fishing and unlawful entry into Canadian waters and were ordered to post $5,000 bond each for the release of their boats.

No pleas were entered.

All of the vessels are from Washington, Oregon and California.

Canadian Fishing Co. Ltd. paid $1,000 a ton for the 25 to 27 tons of albacore tuna, a fisheries spokesman said.

Money from the sales will be held pending the outcome of court cases involving the skippers of the boats.

Nine of the boats were brought to Vancouver, the others were taken to Port Alberni on Vancouver Island where their cargo of 2½ tons of tuna sold for $850 a ton.

Last month, eight American fishermen appeared in Victoria provincial court on charges of unauthorized entry into Canadian waters and were remanded to Feb. 13 for trial, and also ordered to post $5,000 bonds for the release of their boats.

Canada claims that all species of fish within its 200-mile limit are under its jurisdiction, but the U.S. doesn't recognize jurisdiction for highly migratory fish such as tuna.

In Washington meanwhile, tempers are rising over the seizure of U.S. boats. Times' Washington correspondent Claude Adams says the embargo on imports of Canadian tuna imposed by the U.S. State Department could escalate. See page 7 for his assessment of the situation.

New hope in ferry dispute

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Faltering ferry negotiations took a positive turn today when the ferry corporation officially agreed to the appointment of Clive McKee as an Industrial Inquiry Commission.

The union had already tentatively agreed to the move Tuesday when it asked that mediator Fred Geddes report out of the negotiations.

Unlike the appointment of a mediator, however, the establishment of a commission does not prevent the ferry workers from taking job action.

This leaves the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union free to begin striking Thursday.

McKee, a veteran labor mediator, has 14 days to bring both sides to some kind of settlement.

Failing an agreement within that time, he will report to Labor Minister Allan Williams with his recommendations on how he feels the dispute should be ended.

However, in labor circles, the appointment of an IIC is considered a serious step.

Sources in the ministry say commissions have a tremendous record of success.

The fact that both sides of the ferry dispute have agreed to this action is an encouraging sign that the dispute will be settled quickly and hopefully without job action, the sources say.

A marathon session Tuesday that involved the minister, mediator Geddes and both negotiating teams failed to reach an agreement and the union then asked that Geddes report out.

It will take a day or two for him to file his report to Williams.

When the minister officially informs both sides that he has received Geddes' report, it will free the union to take job action, barring other drastic measures from Williams.

The union served strike notice Aug. 22, but was unable to strike legally while the mediator was involved.

The establishment of an IIC while not preventing job action, may encourage the ferry workers to hold their fire during the commission's process.

The failure of the IIC to resolve the dispute still leaves a number of options open to the ministry, including the not-inconsiderable powers of the Essential Services Disputes Act.

Under this statute, the cabinet can order a 90-day cooling off period and/or the appointment of a special mediator.

If a cooling-off period is ordered, neither side is entitled to take any job action.

Ministry officials are hopeful the IIC will resolve the issue without implementing the essential services act.

Oil may force revamp of budget

TORONTO (UPC) — Finance Minister John Crosbie said today he will table his first federal budget in early November, but added if there were no provincial agreement on increased oil prices a second budget may be necessary.

He told a news conference after hearing pre-budget recommendations from the Canadian Federation of Independent Business that it would be difficult to bring down a budget until there was an oil pricing agreement.

"It's difficult to forecast what next year will bring us economically if we don't know where we stand on oil pricing," he said.

"Hopefully it will be settled by October or November so it won't prevent us bringing down the budget in the first half of November."

Crosbie added later there was a possibility of two budgets — before and after an oil price agreement was reached. However, "we would prefer to bring in one budget after this is settled," he said.

Canadian crude oil prices rose to $13.75 a barrel July 1, still far below world prices ranging between $20 and $23.50 a barrel. A further $1-a- barrel increase was scheduled for Jan. 1, 1980.

The Conservative government was committed to increasing domestic prices to world levels more quickly than the previous Liberal administration, although it would mean higher prices for gasoline, heating oil and other petroleum based products.

Prime Minister Joe Clark has been meeting with provincial leaders to work out an agreement on the distribution of oil royalties, most of which go to Alberta, which produces about 90 percent of Canada's oil.

Other provinces, especially the largest consuming province of Ontario, have objected to the imbalance this has caused in the economy and recommended a new method be found for distributing oil revenues nationally.

The federation, which represents 55,000 small and medium-sized businesses, has recommended the federal budget be postponed until agreement was reached on how to invest the funds generated from higher oil prices.

"We can't see any point in even bringing down a budget until we see how that money will be spent," said federation president John Bulloch.

The group said a $5-a-barrel increase in crude oil would push the consumer price index from a forecast 8.5 per cent in 1980 to 10.7 per cent.

Arson feared as blazes hit 2 reserve churches

MERRITT (CP) — Fire destroyed one church and slightly damaged another in two separate incidents Monday on Indian reserves near this Interior community.

RCMP say arson is suspected in both fires and investigations are continuing.

More than 100 volunteers, carrying water in garbage pails and ice-cream buckets, tried to save a pre-1900 wooden church on the Upper Nicola Indian band reserve about 30 kilometres north of here.

"There is nothing but ashes and rubble there," an RCMP spokesman said.

The church's insurance policy was cancelled one year ago because the structure lacked a foundation, said Ron Michel, a band counsellor.

Police said a second fire at a church on the Shulus reserve about nine kilometres west of here was spotted by a passer-by who doused the flames before the church suffered any serious damage.

Near-tragedy of errors

MEXICO CITY (AP) — An automobile collided with a bus on a rain-swept highway near here, the ambulance sent to the scene crashed and a helicopter responding to those accidents went down — but there were only minor injuries to three people, police said.

Zelma Meyer Chilned, 72, was driving home with her 23-year-old maid, Maria del Refugio Diaz, when the car skidded into the path of an oncoming bus, injuring both women. An ambulance picked them up but crashed as it started back and an attendant was shaken up.

A police helicopter picked up the injured, then crashed — but there were no additional injuries.

Other emergency vehicles transported the three injured persons to a Red Cross centre where they were treated for cuts and bruises and released.

Multilingual TV channel raises storm

TORONTO (UPC) — Thousands of angry television viewers are complaining to cable companies because a new Canadian multilingual channel has displaced Buffalo's popular CBS outlet WIVB-TV on Toronto-area screens.

One company reported 3,000 complaints in a single day since newly-licenced CFMT-TV came on the air Monday with plans to broadcast in 26 languages to Toronto's large multi-ethnic population.

Fifty-six cable companies with 1,560,000 subscribers will ultimately be required to make room for the new channel on television dials by shifting the Buffalo station to a channel where reception is impaired by signals from the CN Tower.

Both channels can be seen clearly, however, with the rental or purchase of a $100 converter that provides for up to 29 channels.

Sexnapper McKinney in court once again

Former Wyoming beauty queen Joyce McKinney, accused of abducting a Mormon missionary in England and forcing him to have sex with her, was given a suspended sentence Tuesday for filing a false passport application.

Miss McKinney, 29, and her companion, Keith Joseph May, 26, pleaded guilty on Aug. 23 to the charge, which was originally brought in Seattle in 1977.

The two were charged in England with kidnapping Kirk Anderson, chaining him to a bed and forcing him to have sexual relations with the former Miss Wyoming. Miss McKinney said the accusation relating to Anderson was a "cover story" invented and publicized by Mormon officials to discredit her.

She said she and Anderson were lovers at Brigham Young University while she was working on her doctorate. She said church officials sent Anderson to England to separate them.

McKinney sentenced

The military government of Argentina ordered three homes, a car and $554,000 in bank deposits confiscated Tuesday from former president Isabel Peron saying she had failed to prove they were legally acquired. The government's National Commission of Patrimonial Responsibility let her keep two other pieces of real estate and gifts and decorations she received while in office.

The commission has been investigating Mrs. Peron's property since the armed forces overthrew her in March, 1976, and imprisoned her on charges of misusing public funds.

Brother of notorious outlaw and bank robber Clyde Barrow and the last son of the Barrow family, L.C. Barrow, will be buried today in Dallas. Barrow, who had been ill for several years, died Monday in an Athens, Texas, hospital. He was 66. Barrow was one of six children — four boys and two girls — born to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Barrow, sharecroppers on a farm near Midlothian in East Texas. The family later moved to Dallas, where the elder Barrow opened a service station and the Barrow brothers began their criminal exploits. Buck was killed in July 1933 in a shoot-out with police in Dexfield Park, Iowa, and his wife, Blanche, was captured. Bonnie and Clyde escaped and continued their exploits until they were killed in a police ambush near Arcadia, La., on May 23, 1934.

Mostly, Sylvia Sidney is known as a character actress of some accomplishment, but she is also a leading authority on needlepoint. "My second major interest," she called it yesterday. She has written two books on the subject, and her own needlework is prized by collectors such as the Duchess of Windsor and Cary Grant.

Utah Prison officials say if killer Gary Gilmore had tried to escape — as reported by author Norman Mailer — he wouldn't have had a chance. Mailer says Gilmore exercised daily to get in shape and then offered his attorney $50,000 to help him break out of jail just hours before he faced a firing squad in 1977. "It would have been virtually impossible for him to make an escape," Deputy Warden Leon Hatch said Tuesday. Hatch supervised the security around Gilmore from the time he entered the prison until he was shot. Gilmore became an international figure by refusing all appeals on his behalf and demanding he be shot in 1977 — becoming the first man in 10 years to be legally executed in the United States.

And finally, the fiancee of Charles (Tex) Watson, the convicted murderer who once called himself Charles Manson's "lieutenant for killing," says she and Watson will be married Friday at a prison chapel where he preaches. Kristin Svege, 20, announced plans for the wedding Tuesday, saying it will be the first marriage for both her and the 33-year-old Watson, who was convicted on seven counts of murder in 1971 for the brutal August, 1969, Tate-LaBianca slayings in Los Angeles.

Sadat, Begin agree on Sinai withdrawal

HAIFA, Israel (AP) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin announced agreement today on a speeded-up withdrawal and joint patrols in the Sinai Peninsula, but the two leaders sparred publicly over the touchy question of Jerusalem's future.

Sadat arrived Tuesday for his third visit to Israel and his eighth summit meeting with Begin.

At a joint news conference today after their second session of talks, the Egyptian president said the Arab sector of Jerusalem, occupied by Israel since the 1967 Middle East War, should be included in the Palestinian autonomy plan for the West Bank of the Jordan River and the Gaza Strip.

To this, Begin replied: "Jerusalem is the capital of Israel. It's an indivisible city."

As expected, however, the leaders made progress on three issues related to Israel's gradual return of the occupied Sinai to Egypt:

— The Santa Katarina Monastery area near Mount Sinai will be returned to Egyptian control before Nov. 19, two months ahead of schedule. That is the second anniversary of Sadat's precedent-setting trip to Jerusalem, which launched the peace process, and the Egyptian leader has made tentative plans for a celebration at Santa Katarina to mark the anniversary. It was not immediately clear whether Mount Sinai itself would be covered.

Argan resigns

ROME (Reuter) — Rome's first Communist mayor resigned Tuesday as expected, citing ill-health and advancing age as his reasons.

"I do not want weak health to undermine the city administration," 70-year-old Giulio Carlo Argan told reporters.

He is expected to leave office early next month after three years of grappling with the problems of this 2,500-year-old city.

Argan, one of Western Europe's most distinguished art historians, was elected mayor in August 1976, leading the city's first non-Christian Democratic administrations since the fall of Benito Mussolini.

He told reporters earlier this week: "At my age, I no longer have the energy to deal with the serious burdens of this office."

Pierre Salinger netted in raid on IRA office

BELFAST (AP) — Pierre Salinger, White House press spokesman in the days of the Kennedy administration in Washington, was arrested with a French television crew here Tuesday when British troops and police officers raided an office of Sinn Fein, the Irish Republican Army's political front, official sources reported.

Police headquarters in this capital of Northern Ireland said "American and foreign journalists" and Sinn Fein officials were detained in the swoop on a community centre used by Sinn Fein in the Ballymurphy district where officials of the front were briefing the reporters.

PIERRE SALINGER
. . . arrested in Belfast

Salinger, who has worked for ABC in Paris for some time, was reported to have arrived in Belfast with a crew several days ago.

Sinn Fein sources said the troops and police moved in while Salinger and his team were filming interviews. The sources said the crew's film was seized and several Sinn Fein officials, including Danny Morrisson, editor of the movement's newspaper, An Phoblacht, were also detained.

Police officials said the swoop was ordered by security chiefs following a tip that "republicans planned to stage a display of illegal weapons" during the Sinn Fein briefing.

Rehabilitating Chinatown

The city's proposal for the rehabilitation of Chinatown deserves the support of all Victorians.

The proposal, as outlined to council's planning committee yesterday, would eventually see Chinatown become a unique and vibrant part of Victoria, a tourist attraction in its own right, a constant reminder of the part the Chinese community has played in the city's history. It could perhaps become Canada's own version of San Francisco's Chinatown, already sharing with that California city the honor of having the oldest Chinese communities in North America.

The $1 million plan calls for the painting of buildings, the removal of above-street wiring, the installation of distinctive street signs, landscaping and sidewalks. It would also involve the provision of new Chinese-lantern style street lights and the installation of a huge decorative gate at the corner of Government and Fisgard, the Gate of Harmonious Interest. In the longer term, the special social needs of the Chinese community would also be met through development of a personal care home and a community centre. The Chinese community would be encouraged to celebrate a mid-autumn festival to bring Oriental customs and traditions to public attention — and to provide a special tourist attraction.

Although council's planning committee endorsed the plan enthusiastically, however, it is a long way from being a fait accompli. The problem, as always, is money.

The city cannot afford on its own to implement all parts of the program, although it is willing to put up one-third of the cost of underground wiring, and other money for sidewalks, street signs, and landscaping. Its total contribution to the plan would be only about $270,000.

It hopes that the rest of the necessary money will come from the Chinese merchants, other citizens of Victoria, the federal government, B.C. Hydro, the provincial government and especially the provincial Heritage Trust Fund.

After the program wins official approval from council, it will be up to Victorians to provide the first impetus that will eventually encourage other levels of government to participate. The city hopes that the non-Chinese community will raise $24,000 as a contribution to building the Gate of Harmonious Interest. The provincial Heritage Trust is being asked to provide $48,000 and the Chinese community of the city $24,000.

By speedily reaching these objectives, both Chinese and non-Chinese communities will demonstrate to provincial and federal governments that Victorians are eager to support the restoration of Chinatown. The higher levels of government then could hardly do less than add their support.

Improving relations

One of the items contributing to the settlement of a strike by the Pulp and Paper Workers Union of Canada at Prince Rupert this summer, was the creation of an employee trust fund, to be administered by both union and company.

Trust funds established by companies through contractual agreements are relatively new. There is no reason, particularly in our remote industrialized areas, they couldn't be put to good use in improving such things as safety, work-place environment, and recreation and cultural facilities.

There's a case in point from Ontario. Various companies have contributed through collective agreements to an initiative by the Laborers' International Union to establish a training and rehabilitation center for its members.

A spokesman for the local said that the new training center, if supported by employers, would help to overcome the adversary system between workers and employers.

While only time will tell how much union and company relations will benefit, it is more than appropriate for large unions, many of which have sizable resources, to take some of the burden for member training and rehabilitation, rather than leaving total responsiblity with the government.

Trust funds should not be seen as the only answer to B.C.'s labor problems. Indeed, in many industries they are probably not even appropriate.

However, in cases where both companies and unions can see benefits accruing from them, these funds may prove an innovative method of coping with manpower and labor problems.

Truth is no better

Every once in a while a slice of real drama occurs that must make the day of second-rate television script writers. You know the ones — those who put characters in a plausible situation but put words in their mouths that are impossible for the viewing public to swallow.

Everyone has been duped at some time — whether by a salesman, reporter, politican or whomever. The classic instances have to do with matters of the heart, people being taken for a ride on their emotion.

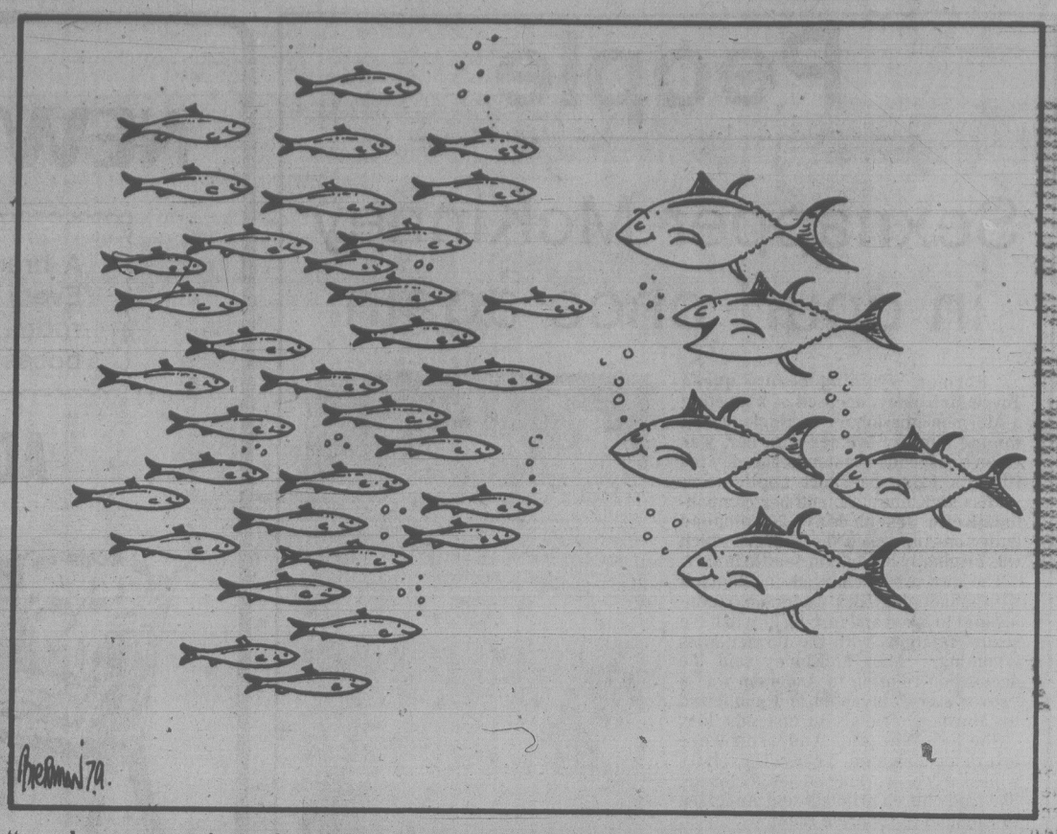
There are cases where emotion and greed are tangled as the basis for many a plot. Let's try one.

A hairdresser meets a man who claims to be a millionaire from Texas. The man is also a director of a large American bank and the owner of Studio 54 in New York.

The man promises the hairdresser a monogrammed Porsche sports car, a ranch near Dallas and, of course, marriage. The hairdresser then quits her $200-a-week job and gives her car to a friend as a present. She then gives the man her Chargex card because he had left his on his private jet.

That scenario has to be one of the worst. But alas, it's true. Straight from the mouth of the victim during an Ontario court case where the great imposter is on trial for fraud.

Somebody said good fiction rests on the quality of imagination. Bad fiction doesn't take any.



"... okay, guys ... just to keep it interesting: herring to the American waters, tuna to the Canadian side."

Of fallout and some far-outs

WASHINGTON — A respected scientist says that radioactive fallout from American A-bomb tests during the 1950s may have helped destroy "the intellectual leadership of a generation" two decades later.

In a chilling report that produced Monday at a New York City conference, Dr. Ernest Sternglass argues that a sharp drop in scholastic aptitude scores among U.S. teenagers in the years 1973-76 can be linked to the nuclear tests in Western states.

Sternglass, a leading anti-nuclear figure who teaches at the University of Pittsburgh school of medicine, theorizes that radioactive elements found their way into fetuses at a crucial stage of their development. The result: damage to learning capability 17 or 18 years later.

In an interview last week with the Village Voice, he said the worst damage may have been sustained by teens with the greatest potential.

Damage glands

"The greatest drops occurred in (aptitude) scores over 700, among those who would have been geniuses, those we depend upon for our inventions, for our poetry."

"Do you see? The intellectual leadership of a generation was largely destroyed."

The sharpest decreases in the test scores were found in the Western states, notably Utah, which borders on Nevada where most of the 1956-57 A-bombs were tested.

It is known that radioactive elements, like iodine, can damage fetal thyroids and pituitaries, which in turn can impair learning ability.

Until the Sternglass findings, the low scores were blamed on such things as sloppy teaching methods, increased TV watching, and poor living conditions in city ghettos.

"But these factors, " Sternglass says, "cannot explain why the scores fell in the Western states, which pride themselves on good schools, clean air and healthy living."

Sternglass has solid scientific credentials. An article, he wrote in 1962, warning of sharp rises in leukemia and childhood cancers because of the bomb tests, was one of the factors that prompted the U.S. and the Soviet Union to sign an atmospheric test ban treaty.

The trials and agonies of Jimmy Carter don't seem to have dampened the enthusiasm of red-blooded Americans to become President of the United States.

The number of candidates for the White House in 1980 topped 100 recently, and more applications are arriving almost daily at the offices of the Federal Election Commission here.

This column has in the past surveyed some of the loonier hopefuls, yet as election year approaches, the would-be presidents are becoming increasingly more bizarre.

For example, Merrill Riddick, 84, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., is an ex-prospector who used to work gold mining claims in Canada. He suggests that one way out of the nation's economic problems is to mine more gold.

Ray Rollinson of New Jersey, who claims to be a grandson of Chief Crazy Horse, says he has received the call from a higher authority. "My destiny is manifest," he writes, describing himself as a man who "roams as a lion and will some day fly as an eagle."

And then there is Robert Waverly Hopson III, wh claims to have negotiated a "very comprehensive" peace treaty with Israel, the Palestinians and the Arab nations. He says he is keeping it under wraps until the proper time.

Hopson pledges to pursue a no-nonsense foreign policy.

"I will not hesitate to use my own nuclear weapons or delivery systems in the security of my people. I will do as I judgeth."

Mitch Egan of Hicksville, Long Island, is not running for president, but if he were he would have an appealing platform: To eliminate hucksters and religious zealots from airport lounges.

Click away

America's big-city airports have in recent years been hit by a plague of aggressive solicitors who grab lapels, engage in shouting matches with tellers, and are not even above chasing their prey into lavatories.

Egan has launched a nation-wide campaign to discourage the louts.

Dressed as giant amphibians with the name Frogie emblazoned on their chests (for Fellowship to Resist Organized Groups Involved in Exploitation), Egan and his cohorts pass out little plastic clickers in airport lounges.

The people are advised to click away when they are accosted, until the hucksters flee in frustration. To date, Egan has distributed 100,000 clickers in airports across the land.

OTTAWA — By the end of the third day at the Jasper Park inner cabinet meeting, driven to desperation by the lack of hard news needed to justify my expense account, I pleaded with a Deep Throat for a tid-bit of cabinet humor to help fill out a column.

He pondered, scratched an ear, and then said: "Once, when we were discussing energy, a minister said, 'This is just a Shell game,' and (Prime Minister Joe) Clark quipped back, 'At least it's not a PetroCan game' ".

You had to be there, I guess.

This was the problem with the Jasper Park conference. You had to be there — inside, the $320-a-day log cabin where Clark and his senior ministers and aides brain-stormed for three-and-a-half days.

Ministers happy

Reporters left the affair with improved golf handicaps and tennis backhands, and with a conviction that the whole thing had been an unproductive bore. The inner ministers left convinced, quite genuinely so, that they had produced a great deal — the basis of the legislative program for Parliament's fall session, the outline of a comprehensive new energy policy, and a start on a new system to control government spending.

Because so many of the decisions, reached within the log cabin have yet to be discussed with the full cabinet, or the party caucus, or the provincial governments, Clark and his ministers, each time they emerged into the sunlight, had almost nothing to say. Which doesn't at all mean that nothing happened inside.

The ministers got to know each other, for one thing. "I hadn't realized it till I got here," said one minister, "but this is the first time since the election we've all been together, without distractions, or aides, or officials."

As well, Clark and his ministers got to like each other. Because they all fought the good fight together in opposition, because they all became ministers at the same time, because, probably most of all, they are are on the inside, the inner group get along like a band of brothers and sisters. Everyone rags Treasury Board president Sinclair Stevens as "The Slasher". Everyone waits, a bit in envy, for Finance Minister John Crosbie's next, outrageous, one-liner.

Actual policy decisions still aside, the meeting succeeded to the extent it did because the group went back to being what most of its members still feel most comfortable being — politicians.

Deliberately, the group discussed politics — on the first day — before it debated policy.

As the first political item, the ministers discussed a post-election party attitudinal poll. Its findings: Canadians are far more confident, about the future of the economy and of Confederation, than most commentators suppose; Canadians look for change in the government meaning by less government and more open government; English-Canadians still regard national unity as Pierre Trudeau's issue, but Quebecers, in an intriguing flip-flop of conventional wisdom, believe that Clark has a better chance of resolving the crisis.

As a second political item, the group discussed itself. To sustain its credibility, the group agreed that the government had to fulfill its election promises (the carving-up of Petro-Canada, as the prime example). Also, pledges to reduce government spending had to be fulfilled. Also, the government's popularity depends as much upon its ability to listen as upon its ability to solve specific problems.

The political discussions concluded, naturally, with patronage.Senate seats soon will go to campaign strategist Lowell Murray, to ex-provincial ministers Bill Doody (Newfoundland), Richard Donahoe (Nova Scotia), Cy Sherwood (New Brunswick), ex-Saskatchewan MP Jim Balfour; Manitoba organizer Nate Nurgitz and Quebec organizer Jean Bazin. As a consolation prize, ex-Ontario MP Ralph Stewart, who crossed the floor from the Liberals, will become consul-general in Atlanta, Georgia.

Time will tell

Thereafter, the going grew steeper as the inner cabinet moved on to the parliamentary program, to energy, and lastly to spending controls. Not until the budget and the federal-provincial energy conference, both due next November, will we really know just how much the inner cabinet actually climbed.

Evident already, though, is that this will be the last meeting of its particular type. By crossing the continent, the inner ministers both raised exaggerated expectations among reporters, and as much, disappointed Albertans by spending their time holed up in a log cabin.

As well, bucolic brain-storming can be more hazardous to cabinet ministers than are their regular ruminations in Ottawa's Langevin Building. By the close of the affair at Jasper, one minister was hobbling on crutches after an after-dark stumble, while another had briefly to be rushed to the hospital, where he was discovered to be feeling no real pain.

Caution not bigotry

I wonder now many of your readers watched the National (CBC-TV) Aug. 28 at 11 p.m.

If they had, they would have learned that according to reports from Ottawa and Montreal we have admitted into our country at least 30 criminals who, while in refugee camps, had beaten and robbed innocent people waiting to come to Canada and start a new life.

Urging caution in processing newcomers is not, never was, and never will be what, in some instances, has been labelled "bigotry".

We are blessed — and this cannot be emphasized strongly enough — especially in the light of what is happening in other parts of the civilized Western World, by internal peace and security, harmony and goodwill among our people.

And this harmony and security should be maintained and protected at all costs.—E. J. Lattes, #432—200 Dallas Road.

Income lower

Is Grace McCarthy trying to prove that she can be meaner than our former minister of human resources? If so, she is succeeding.

How many beef roasts and steaks have she and her family had this month? I haven't been able to afford one of either kind; even ground beef is now out of reach. Last month I was able to buy one carton of cottage cheese and a quart of milk. But this month I can't. She fixed that with the latest cut in our income. Ottawa granted us a little extra as a cost of living bonus. But she doesn't think we deserve it. (I gross less money now than I did the beginning of May '79.) So she took it away from us, regardless of the fact that living costs have gone up in the last four months.

We didn't ask Mrs. McCarthy for rental aid. When she and her party were buying votes, she wrote to us individually and told us to move into better living quarters as she would give us rental aid. Now she takes it back and leaves us with our higher rent and no cost of living bonus.

I am an arthritic and find it hard to write any more. — A. Sauter, Victoria.

Enormous expense

Whoever started this metric business should be made to pay for it. The expense has already been enormous, the benefit to the country nil. Admit the mistake and grin and bear the loss—this is about all we can do about it.—E.W. Abraham, 1125 Faithful Street.

No controversy

The other morning, heading down Cook Street towards the sea, I found myself confronted by two dozen California quail standing shoulder to shoulder across the sidewalk. For several seconds, at ten paces, we remained eyeball to eyeball. Then, recognizing someone who was obviously as appreciative of the lovely morning and surroundings as they, they parted to either side of the walk or assumed perches in the overhanging chestnut tree. When I passed they returned to their posts, prepared to challenge the next pedestrian.

I thought, "Where else could you expect to encounter this sort of experience?" Then came a further thought: "Where else could you expect to encounter a professional writer, out to plot further exploitation of a cockeyed world, giving way to the instinct to address the editor of this hometown paper on something completely uncontroversial?" Is there a clue here to the sense of wonder Victoria inspires in the most hardboiled wayfarer? — Frederick A. Watt, 404-1101 Hilda Street.

Tribute

The appalling murder of Lord Louis Mountbatten has shocked all civilized persons. His record of public service has been well documented, but for friends and supporters of the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children, some measure of the man himself was evident during the clinic's twenty-fifth anniversary celebrations one year ago.

At General Pearkes' invitation, Lord Mountbatten had driven the stake to mark beginning of construction for the clinic's present building in June, 1968. Over the years, he maintained his interest in its work.

As part of the anniversary celebrations, a reunion dinner was held for several hundred clinic graduates at Garth Homer Centre. A telegram was received during the dinner, which read in part: "The G. R. Pearkes Clinic has built up a marvellous reputation and I would like to extend my very warmest wishes to the children, staff, and all those connected with this great project which I am sure will go from strength to strength. Signed: Mountbatten of Burma." — J. S. T. Bourque, President, Board of Directors, G. R. Pearkes Clinic.

Enlist Wallace

The departure of Ms. Kathleen Ruff from the human rights branch is indeed sad news for the whole of British Columbia. She surely was the champion of the downtrodden, the minorities, etc. and she surely had will and courage to stand up to issues, however unpopular or difficult they were at times.

The name that comes to my mind again and again, as the best replacement for the job, is that of Victoria's beloved Dr. Scott Wallace. — B. Bhagwanani, 20-72 Dallas Road.

Irrigation ditches in southern California's rich Imperial Valley

A battle royal over water

THE ECONOMIST

SAN FRANCISCO — Of the shortages that face Americans, gasoline may be the most alarming at present but water may the be most serious in the long run. By the end of the century demand seems certain to have outstripped supply, and every day new plans are made which will require the use of even more water. The latest arise from President Carter's synthetic-fuel proposals which call for the conversion on a huge scale of coal and shale into gas, liquid or slurry, all needing vast quantities of water. Farmers in the mountain states have already carried their alarms to Washington.

The existing producers of electricity, whether depending on coal or nuclear fuel, also use lots of water. Yet, of the coal-producing states in the West, only glacial Alaska has enough fresh water for its needs. California, having barred power plants from its shoreline to safeguard coastal beauty, must now find cooling water for them inland.

Deeper wells

California's farm produce, worth $9 billion a year, also relies on immense volumes of water; these are provided in part by dams, canals and reservoirs subsidized by the federal government, in part by a parallel development backed by state taxes. But California is already pumping from its lands 1.5 acre-feet of water each year more than it puts on to them. (An acre-foot is enough to cover one acre to a depth of one foot, or 325,810 gallons.) Wells are being driven deeper and deeper. Yet farm interests, accustomed in California to well water free for the taking below their own lands, this year fought off proposals to regulate these supplies.

Nor can surface supplies keep up with demand. Contracts to deliver northern water to the southern parts of the state threaten to be as much as 2 million acre-feet short before long.

Such projections have led the federal government to propose doubling or tripling the size of the gigantic Shasta Dam, built in northern California in 1937 with a capacity of 4.5 million acre-feet. Shasta is the key to the federal Central Valley Project, which irrigates California's rich mid-region. A bill to study the dam's enlargement is before Congress.

State planners also look yearningly to new sources in the far north of California, especially to rivers such as the Eel and the Klamath, which environmentalists have succeeded in getting earmarked as "wild rivers" untouchable for industry or farming. They have only recently achieved another victory by persuading the federal authorities not to raise the level of New Melones Dam to capacity.

Environmentalists may not do so well in future, for the administration clearly has an altered respect for the value of water. Two years ago the White House marked proposed water projects in many states as prime examples of unacceptable tax waste. Now dams and reservoirs, especially in coal-bearing areas, are viewed with new tolerance.

In this climate, the Senate will uncomfortably confront this month one of the most serious assaults ever mounted against the basic principles of the Reclamation Act, the 1902 law which first brought federal funds for water to the settlers of the arid West. Federal projects now provide water for some 12 million acres in 17 states, at heavily subsidized rates. Water in Westlands irrigation district in California's Central Valley, for instance, is reported to cost $100 an acre-foot to produce; but under a proposed new contract only $9 would be charged. Users of state water may be charged as much as $30 an acre-foot.

Bigger farms

Even more controversial, however, is the question of farm size. The 1902 act laid down that farms receiving cheap federal water should be no larger than 160 acres (interpreted later to be 320 for man and wife) and that the water recipients should live on or near the land. Recent studies have found widespread abuse of these requirements as huge corporate farms have grown up, especially in California. The principle of using taxpayers' money to help small farmers rather than big agribusinesses has been supported by Congress repeatedly. But this was of little effect until a series of lawsuits in the early 1970s triggered plans for change which threatened many immense land-holdings — some owned by railway interests, oil companies or conglomerates — with forced break-up of their holdings or loss of water.

The secretary of the interior, Cecil Andrus, says that the 160-acre limit is too small, but he has been more tenacious than many of his predecessors in favoring the residency provision. He has suggested an absolute maximum size of holdings, owned and leased, at 960 acres, with corporate owners being given five years to sell out.

The major bill calling for changes in the law, sponsored by Senator Frank Church of Idaho, sets ownership limits of 1,280 acres and puts no maximum on extra leases. Nor does it require residency. According to National Land for People, one of the groups opposed to it, it is filled with loopholes to benefit corporate farmers.

Facing re-election next year, Senator Church is under strong pressure from big farm interests. Senator Alan Cranston of California, who supports him, is under similar pressure, for in his state laxity has permitted corporate farms to multiply. These interests now have much at stake. Arrayed against them are labor, church groups, traditionally liberal Democrats and Cesar Chavez's farm workers' union, which argues that the break-up of these large landholdings may be the only way poor farmworkers can become owners of their own lands. The scene is set for a battle royal.

Canada and Its Natives

As birth rate increases, the costs keep climbing

By DOUGLAS FISHER

(Second of three parts)

In this fiscal year, 1979-80, the main estimates of the federal government show that $867,658,000 will be spent directly on Indians and other descendants of the native people — nearly a billion dollars annually, almost two per cent of all government spending in perpetual special rights to one part of the population by virtue of its race and its forefathers having been first on this continent.

What does the $867 million include? In the estimates one must look at two departments: Indian Affairs and Health and Welfare.

Five programs make up Indian Affairs and Northern Development: administration (minister's office, etc.), Northern affairs, Parks Canada, Indian and Inuit Affairs and Native Claims. Only the last two have any substantial bearing on natives.

The Indian and Inuit Affairs program is slated to cost taxpayers over $728 million this year, by far the biggest dollar chunk in the department, and to require more than 5,000 "person-years" of work.

The program's objective is to be met by taking care of reserves and trusts, providing education and "self-respect through the support of cultural expression," economic and employment development, social services, community infrastructure and services and band government.

The Native Claims program is a relatively new departmental accretion. Loans to native claimants for research, development and negotiations of claims were less organized at first, but a policy statement by Jean Chretien in 1973 required that an office of native claims be set up.

Why? A Native Claims office pamphlet says "The policy recognized that Indian people might have grievances about the government's administration of Indian lands and other assets . . . and the government's fulfillment or interpretation of the Indian treaties."

It goes on: "The policy also recognized that a 'native interest' might exist in those areas of Canada where it had not been extinguished by treaty or superceded by law . . . it relates to traditional and prior usage and occupancy of land by native people in these areas."

Thus was born the notion of specific and comprehensive claims. To the end of this fiscal year, the cost of the claims will be $37.2 million, $10.5 million this year alone. That money in loans and handouts enables natives to go through the process of bringing a claim to the department in hopes of eventual resolution. It also pays grants where agreements have been reached, such as in the James Bay and Northern Quebec Agreement which let Hydro Quebec proceed on the huge James Bay power scheme.

So much for Indian Affairs. National Health and Welfare is the other big spender on native people. This monster department, guardian of some $14 billion this year, has a medical services program which will cost nearly $173 million. Of this, $128.7 million is for Indian Health Services and Northern Health Services (the latter is almost entirely for natives.)

My point in all this is that our federal government spends a large amount of money on native people. From cradle to grave, in theory, education and just about everything else is taken care of.

The situation isn't static either. Just 10 years ago only $184 million was spent on the Indian and Inuit Affairs program. That has quadrupled to the present $738.9 million. Another 10 years could see expenditures of over $2 billion on this program alone. Once the big comprehensive native claims are settled, the monies going out could be astronomical.

Liberal government policy over the past 10 years has much fortified Indianism. But there is also a built-in growth to the native juggernaut: population growth. For years, and perhaps still, we've succumbed to horror stories of white men devastating the aboriginal population through communicable disease and alcohol.

Those days are gone. Not that the Indian and Inuit death rate isn't higher that that of the general population, due to many things — violence being the leading one. But the birth rate is higher still. In 1974, for example, the crude rate of increase per 1,000 was 23 for Inuit, 19 for registered Indians and a mere eight for the rest of us.

When Europeans first encountered this continent, the native population in Canada is guessed to have been 220,000, according to Diamond Jenness in Indians of Canada. After a long period of steep decline which left about 100,000 in the 1880's, improved health care and fecundity brought that up to 295,215 Indians and 17,550 Inuit by 1971 — nearly 313,000. And, if you listen to the wild claims of the Native Council of Canada, there are an additional 750,000 to over one million natives not accounted for in the slimmer figures.

I simply ask myself — where and when does it end? Nearly a billion a year now goes from the rest of us to 313,000 or more Canadians because they had aboriginal ancestors who were here first. That population is growing faster than the general population. Its leaders grow increasingly sophisticated at sucking the public teat. Our governments encourage them to do so. Will they still be doing so a century from now? I hope not, for their sake as well as everyone else's.

They are the new Wise Ones in the community. To them, the Creative Ones are turning for help in daily living. Daily living has become so stressful, so perilous and so complex that it can no longer be left to the amateurs. Anyway, that is what the Creative Ones say.

"Getting outside advice can be very helpful," Angelo Donghia was saying the other day. "I feel that there's an expert for everything."

Donghia's own field of expertise is interior design, not nutrition. Accordingly, he and a number of other fashionable people, such as Halston and Elsa Peretti, are consulting the experts on the seemingly simple matter of eating.

It used to be that the expert on, say, what makes a good breakfast was your mother. But all that has changed. With today's concern over carcinogens and cholesterol, not to mention calories, motherly wisdom has been superseded by the nutritionist's dictums.

Donghia, for one, sees a nutritionist at least twice a year for a review of his special diet and vitamin intake. He starts his day with a so-called Power Drink of fruit juice laced with bran, lecithin, wheat germ, protein powder and other things mother never mentioned. Not only does the drink deliver "instant energy," the designer says, it also helps to wash down the 25 different vitamins he takes, "all kinds of kelp and E's and B complexes."

Eating isn't everything. Exercise, too, contributes to good health, but who really knows how to exercise? Judging by the numbers of wrenched backs and sprained muscles, exercising may be as complicated as eating. Besides, who has a lot of time to exercise?

Not those with high-powered careers, such as Calvin Klein. He and other Seventh Avenue designers want to get the maximum benefit in the least possible time. That explains their penchant for employing personal exercise trainers. Some have the trainers come to their homes each morning and even rout them out of bed on lazy days.

Klein is much more disciplined, though. He is never late for a workout in his design studio, which is equipped with shiny exercise machines and barbells and such. But the key element is his trainer.

"Larry has worked out a whole routine for keeping me in shape, for keeping my batteries charged," said Klein, referring to Larry Melamerson, his trainer. Melamerson also trains Roy Scheider, the movie actor who did those perfect push-ups in Marathon Man.

No matter how sensible their eating and exercise regimens, creative people are hardly immune to mortal ills.

'I adore them, they're so madcap' says astrologist

Like the rest of us, they suffer their share of aches and pains and angst, maybe more. The difference is that creative people often lack the time — and sometimes the faith — required for traditional therapies.

Enter the chiropractor, who manipulates the best of spines; the acupuncturist, who twirls the needles that banish wrinkles and pinched nerves; the astrologist, who tells when the signs are auspicious for signing a contract, making a movie or taking on a new mate.

"I adore them — they're so madcap," says Elizabeth Racine, an astrologist with clients in the worlds of film, theatre, and fashion. The charts of Sylvester Stallone, Lauren Bacall and Norma Kamali are among those read by Mrs. Racine, although she herself is not one to name names. All she says is that creative clients are "very open, very imaginative and never boring."

Now astrologers and acupuncturists and chiropractors are not everyone's idea of life-support systems. Indeed, some may find nutritionists and trainers a bit fringe-y. Never mind. Disciples of the new Wise Ones (as opposed to the old Wise Ones or traditional medical doctors and therapists) do not care.

"My big complaint about most doctors is they don't know a thing about nutrition," said Clovis Ruffin, a young fashion designer, who tells of a hepatitis case that subsided after a week of acupuncture and vitamin shots. "Some people scoff, but all I know is I was up and around in a week."

Ruffin traces the current interest in preventive health and alternative therapies to the counterculture of the 60's. "We were the kids of the baby boom and we were into health foods and natural living. Now all these kids are in their 30's. They're working straight jobs and trying to stay fit."

Another designer, Regina Kravitz, agrees. Her personal life-support system hinges on a chiropractor, an astrologer and an occasional dose of Golden Seal, an Iroquois Indian herb.

"The fashion business is very vanity-related," said Miss Kravitz, "I think we're so concerned about diet and exercise and natural healing because we want to sustain ourselves. It's like you don't want to do in your liver, you don't want another wrinkle."

Still, there are no panaceas. As Dr. Robert Giller, a physician specializing in nutrition and acupuncture, put it: "They think that if they eat right, all problems will disappear. This is not to diminish the importance of a good diet, but I want to stress that a patient may have other problems that are not nutrition-related. I also emphasize the importance of exercise and relaxation."

Debate swirls on Soviet role

Times News Services

HAVANA — Allegations by the United States that the Kremlin controls Cuban foreign policy and that Premier Fidel Castro is trying to extend this control to the non-aligned movement are generating heated debate at the movement's sixth summit meeting.

Mozambique's Marxist president, Samora Michel, ridiculed the notion that the Cuban leader is not his own man in a speech Tuesday. Jamaican Prime Minister Michael Manley also defended Castro, the movement's president for the next three years.

Meanwhile, Yugoslav President Josip Tito "laid down the law" to the movement that he helped found in 1961, telling 53 world leaders to reject Cuban attempts to tilt the group toward Moscow.

Tito's speech to the conference clearly drew the summit's battle lines.

Without once mentioning Cuba or President Fidel Castro by name, Tito rejected Cuba's contention that the Soviet bloc is a natural friend of the non-aligned because it has always helped underdeveloped and oppressed nations.

"We have never consented to be anyone's rubber stamp," the 87-year-old Yugoslav president told the 1,400 delegates from 95 nations. "We must strive against what divides us and resist all attempts to insinuate foreign interests into our ranks."

Addressing the Cuban leader directly in the Palace of Congresses, Jamaica's Manley said:

"Those among the developed countries who seek to malign you and your country as a surrogate acting upon foreign orders mistake the Cuban revolution, mistake the non-aligned movement and mistake the man Fidel Castro.

"No other area of the world has had more extended exposure to, experience with and more proximity to imperialism than Latin America and the Caribbean."

Manley's defence of Cuban foreign policy underlined the growing shift by members of the non-aligned group toward the Soviet bloc, something Castro has been pressing for at the conference over the objections of some longtime members who want the movement to avoid aligning itself with either superpower.

Heavy debate in Havana seems a crashing bore as Kuwait's vice-premier doesn't even stifle yawn

At a news conference Tuesday night, Manley said there is growing convergence between the 96-member movement and the Soviet bloc.

"In the attitude to liberation struggles there is growing similarity," he said. There was also similarity of view "over certain aspects of the new economic order, (in the way the Communists) regard certain types of structural change."

In the drawn out plenary sessions of the conference, now running well behind schedule, many speakers have accused the West of hampering liberation movements, encouraging Israel and denying economic progress to poorer countries.

A chief target of many of the speakers, particularly the leaders of Iraq, Syria and the Palestine Liberation Organization, was Egypt.

Most stopped short of calling for Egypt's suspension for signing the Middle East peace treaties with Israel, although some hinted they might press for this later. PLO Leader Yasser Arafat implicitly called for Egypt to be suspended in a speech Tuesday, saying the peace treaty was merely a U.S.-directed military pact against the Middle East.

Arafat, wearing a pistol on his belt and a traditional Arab headdress, railed for 85 minutes against the Camp David accords, calling them an attempt "spearheaded by U.S. forces to split Arab ranks and down the Middle East in internal wars."

The chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization called the peace treaty Egypt signed with Israel "the worst treason of the Palestinian people," and said that since the March signing, Israeli troops have staged 129 land attacks and 60 air raids against civilians in south Lebanon that have displaced 600,000 people.

"This is a peace treaty of Phantom jets, of napalm bombs, of fragmentation bombs, of weapons outlawed by international conventions," he said.

The important decisions on the political and economic direction of the movement will be taken in closed commissions. However, sources say an emerging theme of the conference is economic co-operation and the need for greater help from oil-rich countries.

The last summit conference in Sri Lanka three years ago produced a program for co-operation in a variety of fields, but leaders here expressed disappointment at the lack of progress on such issues.

Politics, jokes as Dalai Lama meets press

NEW YORK (AP) — The Dalai Lama, spiritual and national leader of the world's six million Tibetans, met the New York press corps Tuesday for some politicking, some sermonizing and even some joking.

The Dalai Lama, the 14th to hold the exalted title, arrived here on Monday for a 49-day American tour, first ever by a Dalai Lama.

An exile from Tibet since the Chinese seized the Himalayan country in 1959, the 44-year-old leader said his American tour was "basically non-political and mainly religious and cultural."

Still, he said: "Basically we are fighting for our own happiness, our own rights. . . . We six million Tibetans are human beings. We have the right to live as human brothers. We have a right to gain our own happiness."

He said he expected support "in this country, where people so regard freedom and liberty." He said there had been some progress in talks with the Chinese that might allow him to return and said he believes he will go home but would not elaborate.

He said there has been some leniency recently by the Chinese in Tibet, but added, "the extent of liberalization that has happened in China has not happened in Tibet as of yet."

The bespectacled, animated Dalai Lama was clad in maroon and gold robes. He spoke in English with some help from an interpreter.

When asked whether he saw his visit as a way of uniting Eastern and Western religious movements, the Dalai Lama said: "We are human beings no matter whether we are rich or poor, educated or uneducated, Eastern or Western. All religions are basically for the same cause — better human beings."

Asked to give a lesson in Buddhism, he said, "Compassion — love others. Selflessness is difficult, but try to become more selfless."

Save $100s on Annual Grocery Costs

Food costs are rising dramatically in Canada. I once experienced the same bite which food takes from the budget as has every Canadian household.

Agriculture Canada reports that over the last 12 months, the cost of groceries has risen over 12.2 percent . . . but costs for my family haven't. Our grocery costs have gone down by over 30 percent.

And the kind of food plus the quality we select has improved.

What's equally important, and exciting, is the money saved on the purchase of groceries . . . in effect, extra money now available for other areas of the family budget.

Consider this: Saving just 15% on a $40.00 a week food bill can mean $312.00 saved over the year.

15% off a $60.00 weekly bill can mean $468.00 extra remaining in the budget per year . . . and a 15% saving is not only realistic, it's easy!

How did one family save 30% on their grocery shopping?

With MARKET MASTER, a system developed through our own "battles" with supermarkets and rising food costs.

My name is Bill Oldfield, and what I've discovered about grocery shopping can literally save hundreds of dollars on your annual food bill.

MARKET MASTER was developed locally in my home town, Kitchener, Ontario, and initially tested there and in Victoria. It has since been tested in Vancouver, Calgary, Regina, Winnipeg, Ottawa, Toronto and London.

The results are always the same . . . consistently 15 to 30 percent off your food bill.

The MARKET MASTER system doesn't require that you buy in case lots, nor does it require you buying sides of meat and an expensive deep freeze.

It doesn't involve "co-op" shopping with neighbours or clubs for bulk or quantity purchases . . . nor buying "no-name" products.

And it definitely doesn't require that you change your diet in character, quantity or quality.

What does it require?

Simply the same interest or concern, as shown in my household, that significant savings be made on grocery costs. With that and MARKET MASTER, you'll be on your way to food savings you would now believe impossible. I guarantee it.

What does it cost?

The MARKET MASTER package can be obtained for eight dollars . . . less than I'd expect the average family to save during just the very first week of use.

Fair enough? I hasten to add, and emphasize, that if you don't agree that MARKET MASTER will save everything I said it would, return it within the next month and a total refund will be promptly forwarded to you.

I have no doubt that you're skeptical. After all, what we've discovered is probably contrary to everything you've heard from friends, relatives or innumerable "experts" commissioned by the government.

But how many of them have offered you a means of saving on your food bill? — RIGHT AT THE CHECK-OUT COUNTER.

So it's over to you.

A month from today, inflation guarantees that your food bill will be up another percent . . . or . . . I guarantee it will be DOWN a minimum of 15 percent.

The Canadian government calculates that the average family must now spend 21.5 percent of its budget money on food.

Can you afford not to try MARKET MASTER?

Please send me your solution to high grocery costs, the MARKET MASTER package.
If I return the material — for any reason — within 31 days, I am guaranteed my money will be promptly refunded in full to my enclosed address.
On that basis, I've enclosed a cheque/money order for eight dollars ($8.00), which includes postage and handling. (Do not send cash).

Vancouver shoreworkers sort tuna seized from 9 U.S. fishboats Tuesday.

U.S. eyes wider embargo in West coast 'tuna war'

By CLAUDE ADAMS
FP Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — The West coast tuna tussle, which escalated Monday with a U.S. embargo on Canadian tuna products and the veiled threat of a wider embargo, is more than a localized quarrel over a few migrating albacore.

Diplomatic temperatures are rising here in Washington at the effrontery of the Canadians in seizing 19 U.S. vessels off the British Columbia coast and using the incident as a lever in a separate fisheries issue.

Ottawa has little reason to worry about a U.S. embargo on tuna alone. Its export of tuna products to the U.S. in 1978 amounted to about $170,000, or roughly three per cent of its world tuna exports.

The Canadian government is looking beyond tuna to the lucrative herring stocks which its West coast fishermen exploit.

Canada, it was learned, is upset by plans of fishermen in Washington State to begin harvesting herring on their coast, and what impact this might have on the B.C. herring roe industry.

Canada wants to strike some kind of trade-off deal, involving tuna and herring on the coast. But the Americans aren't interested.

Instead, the U.S. State Department said it is examining the possibility of expanding its tuna embargo to cover other fish products. Canada ships about $550 million worth of fish and fish products into the U.S. every year.

Under U.S. law, the secretary of state has the power to embargo such foreign fish imports as he deems "appropriate" when American commercial vessels are arrested by a foreign power.

A total embargo is unlikely, because it could have a devastating effect on U.S. processors who depend on Canadian fish. But in even mentioning the possibility, the U.S. has signalled just how seriously it views the Canadian police action.

By late Tuesday, the tuna dispute remained at an apparent stalemate. "No discussions are being held," a U.S. official said, adding that channels of communications remained open as always.

The dispute is expected to generate even more heat this week as U.S. congressmen return to Washington from their summer recess. It is expected that a number of U.S.-Canada fisheries agreements and protocols, which must be ratified by Congress, will come under extra-critical review.

In the tuna dispute, both countries are locked in a legal box. The U.S. does not claim sovereign rights over highly-migratory fish such as tuna within its 200-mile fishing zone.

Canada, on the other hand, does not exempt migratory fish from its 200 miles, and if Canadian fishermen scream "trespass" at the sight of foreign vessels, the government has little choice but to enforce its statutes.

The U.S. does not try to prevent its own tuna fishermen from venturing into foreign waters, and compensates fishermen who are fined for doing so.

Tuna have not been an international problem until this year, because they had not ventured into B.C. waters in numbers since the 200 mile fishing zones were declared.

LIVERPOOL, N.S. (CP) — The captains of two U.S. fishing vessels are to appear in court here Sept. 10, each on two charges of illegal fishing operations off the Nova Scotia coast.

Captains Joseph L. Randazza of the trawler Peppy and Bonnie Akerley of the vessel Patrol are charged with illegally trans-shipping fish and with illegally entering Canadian waters without a permit.

Moro suspects

ROME (UPI) — Italian judicial officials said Tuesday murder charges in the terrorist assassination of former Premier Aldo Moro have been filed against three more suspects, an Italian Marxist believed hiding in France and two Red Brigades gang members arrested in Rome.

It brought to 23 the number of people directly charged in Moro's murder.

Named in the new charges were Lanfranco Pace, sighted recently in Paris and still believed on the run in France, and Valerio Morucci and Adriana Faranda, arrested in Rome May 29 in possession of the submachine gun used to kill Moro.

The new charges were signed by chief anti-terrorist magistrate Achille Gallucci last week, judicial officials said, but had been kept secret.

Public board cuts private school aid 25 years later . . .

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Vancouver school board faces a dilemma; it must take away health services from about 4,600 children or get thrown out of office.

So the board decided to tell the city's independent schools that funds for their health and medical services will be cut off at the end of the month.

The board voted Tuesday to cut the funding of about $112,000 a year on Sept. 30, ending a loose but illegal arrangement between the public and private education systems which has lasted 25 years.

The board learned in May that it had been providing health services for the independent schools since the early 1950s, after a spokesman for the school asked that the arrangements be formalized.

In June, the board's lawyer said the funding was contrary to the Public Schools Act. He said public school boards have no authority to provide such services and would be under penalty of law by providing them.

Section 294B of the act states penalty for an unauthorized expenditure is double the amount spent — in this case $224,000 — and any board member "convicted . . . shall be disqualified from holding any board office for five years after his conviction or until he is granted a pardon, whichever is earliest."

The board, the city health department, the provincial government and the Federation of Independent School Associations have been haggling over the issue all summer.

Education minister Pat McGeer has suggested the services be paid by the ministry of health.

"It seems to me the ministry (of education) is probably taking the kind of position we are — namely, that people in the education business shouldn't be funding health services," said trustee Peter Hebb.

Trustees said they felt they were endangering the health of public school children if the independent schools were left without coverage.

However, school superintendent Dante Lupini said immunizations, which are provided free to everyone by the city health department, are not included in the services.

Critics of the agreement have said the independent schools should pay for their own health services out of the public funding they receive under the 1977 Independent Schools Support Act.

Jack Robertson, the board's head of business administration, has said the board didn't even notice that it was paying the bill for the independent schools until it broke down and examined its health budget.

The independent schools federation has estimated the schools would have to raise about $45 extra per student if funding were discontinued.

Better-than-average year cheers PNE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two weeks of fair weather boosted attendance and revenues at the annual Pacific National Exhibition fair which ended Monday night, fair officials said.

Total attendance for the 17-day affair was 1,277,873, an increase of 58,481 from 1978 and the third highest in exhibition history.

Controller Herb Bryant said he expects about $4.5 million in revenues when figures are complete and about $4 million in expenses.

President Erwin Swangard said many changes were made this year, with people wanting more action, more things to do and more free entertainment.

"I'm convinced we've made the right moves," said Swangard, "because while attendance at most other exhibitions — like Toronto's Canadian National Exhibition — is going down, we're going up."

This year's fair saw more live entertainment and fewer star spectaculars. The rock group Heart drew 17,500 persons for a one-night stand.

The biggest winner of all was Lorna White, a 45-year-old housewife from nearby Richmond, who won a $150,000 dream home in a program draw.

Her daughter Julie, 21, bought the ticket a week earlier.

Four victims identified

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Police Tuesday released the names of four more victims of the crash last week of a twin-engine amphibian plane on nearby Digby Island.

The name of one of the seven dead was being withheld pending notification of relatives.

Identified Tuesday as crash victims were:

Frederick Joseph Hawinkles, 41, and Robert Taylor, 47, of Vancouver, Douglas Ray Fletcher, 34, of Delta, and David Nelson McRonald, 34, of Burnaby.

Earlier, police said Denny Adams, 30, from Masset on the Queen Charlotte Islands and pilot of the 10-seat Grumman Goose, was killed in the crash.

Adams had lived here for the past three months.

Also killed was Bernard Martin, 34, of Port Edward.

The Trans Provincial Airlines plane crashed Thursday on a British Columbia Hydro right-of-way on Digby Island, site of the Prince Rupert Airport. It was on a flight from Kitsault, an isolated mining community on Alice Arm northeast of here.

Pulp hassle resolved at Harmac

NANAIMO (CP) — Members of the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC) voted Tuesday to accept a proposal to end a two-week strike that closed MacMillan Bloedel's Harmac mill for two weeks.

The 1,400 hourly-paid workers were expected to be on the job today after resolution of the dispute which involved pulp produced during a previous strike at the mill over a new contract.

Harmac and union officials said in a joint statement that the 1977-79 collective agreement is again in effect and all local issues have been settled, including disposition of disputed pulp.

Some of the pulp will be shipped to MacMillan Bloedel's Powell River mill while the remainder will be partially reprocessed at Harmac. Both sides have agreed not to say how much pulp will be reprocessed or shipped out of the mill.

Returning to the 1977-79 contract is only a temporary measure, said Stan Shewaga, president of PPWC Local 8, because some union locals have yet to agree on a wage settlement accepted by the industry in August.

Meanwhile, company spokesman Brian Smith said an electrical failure at the mill is delaying the startup.

"It's a technical question, I haven't a clue as to how it happened," said Smith.

An investigation will be launched into the failure after the problem has been resolved.

The vote to return to work came after PPWC officials proposed, among other things, that pulp produced by supervisors during the three-week strike in July be sold and the proceeds given to charity.

The issue sparked a walkout Aug. 21, the 12th work stoppage at the mill since January.

Indian activists seeking refugee status

VANCOUVER (CP) — American Indian Movement activists are applying for refugee status in Canada because they are worried they will be treated like "draft resisters were" if they return to the United States, Movement leader John Trudell said Tuesday.

Trudell said he hopes Canadians will accept Indian activists, protesting conditions in the U.S., in the same way they accepted American war resisters during the Vietnam era.

The Indians originally applied for political asylum but changed their request when told Americans cannot apply for asylum, said Walter Jennings, immigration official.

Jennings said only people fleeing from certain countries can seek asylum in Canada. But anyone can apply for refugee status.

"They have to comply with U.N. (refugee) requirements which include fear of persecution or fear for liberty if they return home," he said.

Trudell and companion Darrell Butler have filed application statements which will be reviewed by an Ottawa-based committee including external affairs representatives, department of immigration spokesmen and a Canadian U.N. representative who acts as an official observer.

Their visitors' visas were extended to Oct. 5 pending a decision.

Mine manager knocks union

FRASER LAKE (CP) — Workers on strike at the Endako molybdenum mine are victims of an irresponsible union, says an open letter from mine manager John Dodge.

The workers, members of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, have been on strike at the central Interior mine, owned by Placer Development Ltd., for 6½ months.

Dodge says in his letter management believes the union negotiating committee is not interested in a settlement.

It was the second open letter written by the company. The first was sent after Kelowna lawyer Hugh Ladner, appointed by the provincial government as an industrial inquiry commissioner, recommended a two-year contract.

Union spokesman Bob Greene said the company letter is an attempt "to split the negotiating committee."

Kettle Valley rail lease offered

KELOWNA (CP) — The provincial government would be prepared to lease the Kettle Valley rail line for a nominal amount if a proposal for its use as a tourist attraction was made by the private sector, says Premier Bill Bennett.

Although the province studied the 208-kilometre rail line east of here and found renovation costs prohibitive, the premier said during the weekend that the government still encourages private enterprise to take on the task.

Tourism Minister Don Phillips announced a moratorium last week on plans by Canadian Pacific to demolish the scenic and historic line from Midway, east of here, to Penticton.

Walkout response to plant death

FORT NELSON (CP) — About 85 union workers at the West Coast Transmission Co. gasification plant walked off the job Tuesday in protest over the death of a worker in the plant.

An unidentifed worker was killed Monday while welding a pipe when gas fumes exploded, a union spokesman said, and another worker received minor injuries.

Dental council to discuss charges

VANCOUVER (CP) — The council of the College of Dental Physicians of British Columbia has set Sept. 28 to discuss internal criticism about $50,000 in per diem payments to its 1978 president, Dr. Ted Ramage, the current president, said Tuesday.

Treasurer Dr. Murray Bloom complained last week about per diem payments made to 1978 president Dr. Don MacFarlane. He also said the college has locked the door to his office its Vancouver headquarters in retaliation against his research into payments made to college officials last year.

$65.5M in capital requests okayed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Municipal Finance Authority of British Columbia has approved requests for capital funds, totalling $65.5 million, from 43 municipalities and 12 regional districts, authority chairman Jim Stuart said Tuesday.

The funds are required for a variety of public works projects, although most of the money ($50 million) will go towards water and sewer projects.

Vancouver warns produce sellers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Fruit and vegetable farmers who sell at illegal roadside stands have been warned by the city to stop setting up shop within the city limits or face impoundment of their merchandise and equipment.

Parents protest

TWO MILE (CP) — A group of parents kept their children out of school Tuesday to protest the closure of a two-room school.

M-F chief makes yards

TORONTO (CP) — If Victor Rice, president of Massey Ferguson Ltd., hasn't completely cured his company's financial ailments, he must at least be given credit for removing it from the critical list.

A lot of observers thought Rice was unrealistic a year ago when he predicted the huge but ailing Toronto-based farm-implement maker would break even this year.

At that time he was the new president of a company on its way to a loss of about $250 million, the largest one-year plunge ever in Canadian business.

The 38-year-old chartered accountant was surprised when he was chosen to head Massey Ferguson, but a year later his prediction seems likely to be achieved.

With Rice at the helm, the company recorded a $3.3-million profit in the three months ended July 31, compared with a loss of $25.8 million in the corresponding 1978 quarter.

Rice says this is the real profit number showing what the company's operations achieved. It reported a final profit for the quarter of $53.8 million after taking into account three non-operating items, a tax credit of $95.4 million, a re-organization expense provision of $18.7 million and a foreign exchange loss of $26.1 million.

On an operating basis, Massey lost $13 million in the first quarter and broke even in the second. But the fourth is normally the most profitable for producers of farm equipment and tractors and Rice says the company should break even.

Massey is a lot better off than a year ago. After absorbing huge write-off provisions and operating losses, it showed a loss in the first nine months of last year of $145 million. This year, it shows a profit of $62 million for the period.

It is still a sick company but help is on the way. A financing plan to raise $300 million to $500 million has been announced. Argus Corp. Ltd., the controlling Massey shareholder, would take $100 million of new Massey convertible preferred shares, and the balance of the financing would come through other preferred share sales.

Rice says the fresh capital will be used to reduce Massey's mammoth debt load.

Many observers say the tractor and farm machinery business is cyclical, but Rice denies it.

"The only thing that is cyclical is Massey's profit," he says. "I hate to say it, but Massey is giving the industry a bad name by not making money."

Part of Massey's problems stem from its position as a worldwide manufacturer. With operations in Brazil (inflation, currency controls), Iran (political turmoil), West Germany (a subsidiary that lost $50 million last year) and the vagaries of foreign exchange fluctuations, there was lots that could go wrong. And did.

But now, with the Iranian plant gone, the West German plant's losses expected to be cut to $10 million this year, and the development of the new 2800 series tractors, Massey is hoping to narrow the gap in the North American market between itself and the two major U.S. producers, Deere and Co. and International Harvester.

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — More than half the privately owned land in the U.S. is held by one per cent of the landowners, the agriculture department said. The department's survey of private and rural land, which said 28.8 million Americans own land, showed that landowners were mostly white males between the ages of 50 and 64.

Cafeteria lunches contract fodder?

TORONTO (CP) — Cafeteria lunches are heating up — as a bargaining issue between labor and management.

Soon, the corporate lunch counter will rank with wages, cost-of-living allowances and dental plans as a factor in contract tugs-of-war.

That's the opinion of Manfred Doblinger, 39, president and chief executive of VS Services Ltd., Canada's most diversified food service company.

"Cheaper meals will come, because unions will look on meals as a benefit and negotiate with management for meal subsidies," he said in an interview.

In a recent precedent-setting decision, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that any employer who provides a food service to its employees must bargain any proposed price increases at the union's request.

Banks, insurance firms and drug companies (largely non-union organizations) have subsidized their cafeterias," Doblinger said.

And it won't be cheaper prices alone that the union's will want. A better eating enviroment will be part of the deal.

Another reason he feels corporate cafeteria subsidies will increase is because Canadians are following the European habit of eating the largest meal at mid-day.

For the year ending Sept. 30, VS Services expects sales of $125 million and pre-tax profits of $5.8 million.

Shareholders back bank merger

BY ESTELLE DORAIS

MONTREAL (CP) — Shareholders of the Provincial Bank of Canada and Bank Canadian National have voted overwhelmingly in favor of a merger of the two institutions into a new bank to be called the National Bank of Canada.

The new bank will rank sixth of the 11 chartered banks to be left after the merger, the same rank now held by Bank Canadian National with $9 billion in assets. Provincial Bank has assets of $6 billion.

The new bank is expected to begin operations Nov. 1, pending approval of the governor-in-council.

With combined assets of $15 billion, and a total of 868 Canadian offices, most in Quebec, the new bank will try to be competitive nationally, said Michel Belanger, president and chief executive officer of the Provincial Bank of Canada.

Belanger will hold the same position with the new bank and Germain Perreault, chairman of the Bank Canadian National, will be chairman of the National Bank of Canada.

The merger will be effected through the exchange of one share of the new institution for each share currently held by shareholders of both banks.

While the legal name of the new bank will be the National Bank of Canada, the name will be shortened to National Bank for all marketing purposes, he later told a press conference.

The logo for the new bank is a fat, bright red, stylized N.

Bank Canadian National issues the Visa card, while the Provincial Bankissues Mastercharge. The new bank will continue to issue both, Belanger and Perreault said.

As for the banks' computer systems, they are already compatible because they had both "by accident used the same outside consultants and the same basic hardware," said Belanger.

'U.S. tax laws sour our tourism'

RALPH WILSON

TORONTO (UPC) — U.S. income tax laws are draining up to $100 million a year from the Canadian economy and are to blame for a major loss of Canadian tourism jobs, the vice-chairman of the Tourist Association of Canada says.

Reginald Groome, of Montreal, told a Toronto audience that section 602 of U.S. income tax provisions has caused numerous cancellations of American conventions originally scheduled to be held in Canada.

The law allows Americans only partial tax deductions when they attend conventions in Canada. Canada, on the other hand, allows full deductions for conventions anywhere in the world.

Groome said KVOS-TV, a Bellingham, Wash., television station and its parent company, Wometco Enterprises, have succeeded in linking legislative reform of section 602 with sought-after changes in Canada's Bill C-58, which has affected Canadian advertising in U.S. border television stations.

KVOS-TV transmits to Vancouver and Victoria, broadcasting Canadian ads.

Groome said Canadian tourism is "a hostage and innocent victim in this war of linkage — a war which has put many a Canadian hotel and restaurant employee on the unemployment lists."

One Montreal hotel, he said, dropped 200 to 300 employees from its payroll, primarily as an aftermath to section 602.

Groome warned of possible travel and currency restrictions as well as boycotts against individual corporations if Americans and Canadians fail to find a "neighborly response" to U.S. tax and Canadian broadcasting regulations.

"Wometco and the others opposing reform of section 602 have badly damaged Canadian tourism — and continue to do so — at the very same time Canadians are being asked to buy Wometco products and services," Groome said.

Wometco, one of the largest Coca-Cola bottlers in the United States, also controls franchising areas in British Columbia, Newfoundland and Labrador.

It also operates services in Florida and the Caribbean, traditional vacationing spots popular with Canadians. The giant corporation also has extensive entertainment interests in Florida, Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic, the Virgin Islands and the Bahamas, frequented by Canadian travellers.

A number of U.S. organizations are also at odds with the Wometco stand, he said.

Groome said the American Hotel and Motel Association, American Express, and the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Bartenders International Union, among others, have recognized the unfairness of the U.S. policy and sought to obtain North American exemption from the section.

Group prefers modest realty

TORONTO (CP) — "Monuments are for pigeons" is the unofficial motto of the Lehndorff Group, a diversified and successful real estate investment company.

The Hamburg-based investment organization seeks modest-sized buildings for its German clients, ignoring the huge towers and sprawling shopping malls dotted around Canadian cities.

Louis Matukas, executive vice-president and general manager of the Canadian arm of the Lehndorff Group, says the monuments-for-pigeons creed has brought about $155 million of West German money into Canada.

The company, whose North American holdings are mostly in Canada, was a portfolio which incldes shopping centres, apartment buildings, office buildings, condominiums, land being readied for development and even farms.

The attraction to the German investors is low-risk, stable investments with a reasonable return.

Lehndorff prefers to buy and manage income-producing properties and less than one per cent of its holdings are in development.

Its promotion literature notes:

"Lehndorff does not build or buy giant-scale projects, but invests in normal-sized properties, which can be managed advantageously and profitably and sold easily when appropriate."

Last year, that philosophy made a profit of $17.9 million, or an average 11.4-percent return, for Lehndorff's 3,200 small and medium-sized German investors.

Matukas said total North American assets have a market value of about $1.2 billion, with $800 million in 200 properties in Canada.

Midwest forecast declines

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatchewan's reserves of uranium oxide has dropped by 41 million pounds after Esso Minerals Canada Ltd. announced new drilling results at its Midwest property.

The 42 per cent decline in established and estimated reserves at Midwest Lake is substantial in terms of revenue and energy value: Each pound of uranium oxide produces as much electric power as 34 barrels of oil and even pessimistic forecasts of world prices are $20 U.S. per pound.

But the revised estimate leaves Esso and its partners with a rich ore body that is expected to yield 56 million pounds.

Esso vice-president Gordon Willmon said plans for the Midwest Lake uranium mine are taking shape.

"Assuming the necessary government approvals are received, that they are timely and include reasonable operating and financial conditions, we propose to start construction sometime in 1981. The production of uranium will commence in 1985."

Based on the new reserve estimate, annual production will be six million pounds.

Sask. firm buys into Quebec

MONTREAL (CP) — The third largest soft drink bottler in Quebec, Seven-up Montreal Ltd., has been purchased by Agra Industries Ltd. of Saskatoon for an undisclosed amount.

Agra president Benjamin Torchinsky said the price was "in the high seven figures."

Torchinsky estimated Seven-up's annual sales at $28 million and said the addition would triple Agra's volume. Seven-up president and principal shareholder Keith Wallace will become a vice-president ast Agra.

PHONE MART COMES TO VICTORIA.

B.C. Tel has officially opened a Phone Mart at Hillside Avenue, Victoria.

And just in case you haven't heard, Phone Mart is a telephone store where you can pick and choose from a terrific selection of telephone styles and colours.

Here's how it works:

Let's say your residence is one of the many homes or apartments in this area where we've already installed special phone jacks and converted the equipment to our new plug-in system.

Now, let's say you'd like to change the colour or style of your present phone. (Charges may vary.)

You just unplug it at the jack and bring it into the Phone Mart.

There you'll see different telephones on display in a variety of beautiful styles and colours.

Simply exchange yours for the one you like better.

And take it home with you.

And plug it in. The Phone Mart staff will look after the applicable billing charges.

Shopping at the Phone Mart saves time, especially for those busy people who find it difficult to stay home for the installer to connect the phone. And by picking up a phone yourself you save with reduced service charges.

Most areas in B.C. are gradually being converted to the plug-in system. When the conversion is done as part of our planned program, there is no charge.

If you're not already on the plug-in system, come in to Phone Mart, pick out your phone, and we'll arrange to have the conversion done for you. You'll only be billed the standard connection charge.

You'll find the Phone Mart is a handy place to pay a phone bill or have your phone repaired.

And when you decide to add an extension phone or two.

That's Phone Mart — now open at Hillside Avenue, across from The Hillside Shopping Centre.

Conservation lab mobile

By JOHN HENEY

OTTAWA (CP) — If Sir John A. Macdonald's timepiece has waited this long for a cleaning, it can wait two more months, dismantled on the workbench of an Ottawa laboratory.

Bob Barclay, who is restoring the antique table clock, is busy in the Maritimes piloting the pride of the Canadian Conservation Institute — a new mobile laboratory bringing artifact conservation to local museums.

"Barclay won the draw," grins a colleague at the institute's modern laboratories here where 65 restoration experts reverse the wear of time and the elements on furniture, paintings, clothes, manuscripts, and other museum pieces from across Canada.

Barclay and the institute's director, Brian Arthur, recently pulled out of the parking lot, beginning the mobile lab's maiden voyage only hours after the $25,000, instrument-filled van was officially dedicated by Secretary of State Donald MacDonald.

Budget cuts were the inspiration for this project by Canada's museum conservation institute, one of the largest of its kind in the world.

The institute's budget was cut by one-third in October, 1978. Laboratories operating in Moncton, N.B., Quebec City and Vancouver to help local museums restore and preserve artifacts were closed in April this year.

"Without the regional centres, mobile labs like this one will fill the gap, giving us a chance to get to the grass roots of the museum system," Arthur said before leaving in the van to visit 18 museums in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

He plans to have his staff rotate in two-week shifts putting an expert in fine arts conservation and another specializing in antiques constantly on the road during the summer.

The two will visit local museums, give staff training sessions, test lighting and humidity levels affecting artifacts, and carry out what on-the-spot conservation they can complete during their brief visit.

The service is free, but host museums have been warned they won't be able to greet the van with lists of what they want fully restored.

"We'll have to watch the over-eagerness of some curators," says Tom Stone, who specializes in native artifacts and who helped design the van's cupboard-lined interior.

The demand for restoration work is so great only five regional committees set up for the purpose can refer specific artifacts to the institute for conservation work.

Meeting twice yearly, committees for the Maritimes, Quebec, Ontario, the Prairies and British Columbia review requests which may come only from public institutions. The eight or nine members of each committee, which include archeologists, historians and architects, will be in close contact with the mobile van as it travels through the regions.

Arthur has already asked the National Museums for funds to build five more of the mobile labs, one for each region and one on standby for emergencies.

"In a crisis, getting one of these vans in the field right away would make a world of difference," Arthur says, thinking how he could have used one to cope with recent flooding in Ontario and Manitoba that damaged many artifacts.

Arthur hopes an expanded laboratory fleet will open training opportunities for conservation students.

More than newspaper hits porch

MONTREAL (CP) — A woman who thought the delivery boy was finally bringing her morning newspaper got a surprise Tuesday when she opened her door and found a fleeing bank robber.

"The man shouted 'move,'" Evelyn Trouton said later. "He didn't have to say it twice. I moved."

She hid in the bathroom until police arrived and arrested the man — one of three who robbed a branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce of $5,000. Another was captured in the same apartment building and the third captured on the roof.

No one was injured.

Crane crash kills

BENONI, South Africa (Reuter) — Ten blacks were killed and 40 others were injured when a mobile crane crashed into a crowded commuter train at Benoni, near Johannesburg, a railway spokesman said. The crane left a road alongside the track, plunged down an embankment and hit the seventh car of a 12-car train.

Hydro creek diversion to boost salmon run

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro says it hopes that the opening of a partial creek diversion near Lillooet will eventually double the number of sockeye salmon reaching spawning beds in the Seton-Anderson lakes system in peak years.

Aim of the $100,000 project, being funded by Hydro, is to restore losses to both runs caused by the Seton hydroelectric plant.

Biologists say the project could increase the value of the runs by up to $1 million in peak years.

Hydro spokesman Sydney Orpwood said Gates Creek sockey migrate in July and August, so the diversion will not help the run until next year.

However, the diversion will be finished in time to assist the Portage run from mid-September to mid-October, he said.

The Seton plant takes water from Seton Lake and discharges into the Fraser River. The migratory route for the salmon is upstream past the power house and then up Seton Creek.

However, biologists say when the fish reach the power house they sense water from their home creek and attempt to enter Seton Lake from that spot, but are unable to do so. As a result, only half the Gates and Portage salmon complete the spawning cycle.

The diversion project involves opening an existing tunnel from nearby Cayoosh Creek. The partial diversion will mix Cayoosh Creek water with Seton water and biologists hope that by balancing the power house water and the Seton creek water, all the fish will find their way through Seton Creek to the spawning grounds.

Hydro built the Seton plant in 1956.

Laskin surgery

VANCOUVER (CP) — Bora Laskin, chief justice of the Supreme Court of Canada, is in good condition in St. Paul's Hospital here after undergoing surgery, a hospital spokesman said today.

Laskin, who had an operation on Friday, was scheduled to address a special convocation at the University of British Columbia today.

Nathan Nemetz, chief justice of the B.C. Appeal Court, was to replace Laskin at the convocation.

SPCA burner permit refused

City council has refused a request from the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals to build an incinerator to get rid of the remains of unwanted pets.

The animals are destroyed at SPCA headquarters at Napier and Burnside.

The public works committee Tuesday agreed with city engineer John Sansom that it would be "a retrograde step" and asked city manager Jim Bramley to explore other facilities and methods the SPCA might use.

The society had written a graphic letter last month outlining the problem of disposing of dead cats and dogs.

"In the current system about 600 kilograms of euthanized animals are stacked in a small trailer and towed to the city of Victoria disposal plant on Store Street.

"At that point they are dumped into large semi-trailers for disposal at the Hartland dump. At the dump they may or may not be covered right away and due to the rough trip, often come out of the bags.

"Crows and gulls take over from there, making a very unsanitary and possibly disease-spreading mess."

The most humane and sanitary way of disposal, the SPCA said, would be pathological incineration and certain models on the market would meet bylaw requirements.

Sansom informed council that the 1976 air pollution control bylaw has encouraged the removal of incinerators from local hospitals and apartment buildings.

Only two new ones have been allowed since then, one at Royal Jubilee Hospital to get rid of garbage and pathological specimens and the other at the new RCMP headquarters on Topaz Avenue to burn confidential papers.

Before the judge

Judge Blake Allan has delayed sentencing of a 56-year-old Langford man who pleaded guilty Tuesday in Victoria provincial court to two provincial fishing violations.

Robert Archibald Simpson, of 2697 Peat Road, pleaded guilty to selling salmon caught while sport fishing and resisting a fisheries officer.

Crown counsel John Savage told the court fisheries officers began surveillance of Simpson in August after information was received from Tahsis that he was selling fish commercially.

On Aug. 19, officers checked Simpson's catch of seven fish and, unknown to him, marked them with ultra violet material.

They followed Simpson the next day to Oakland Fisheries Ltd., 630 Montreal, where he sold three fish for $218.60.

The undercover officers then followed Simpson after the sale and apprehended him. Simpson initially said he only weighed the fish at Oakland's but later admitted selling them.

When officers attempted to seize Simpson's 1966 Mercury one-ton truck used to transport the fish, he became agitated and refused to surrender it, accounting for the resisting charge.

Savage said this type of offence was extremely difficult to detect and required surveillance from the moment the fish is caught to the moment it is sold. He asked for forfeiture of Simpson's vehicle and the fish in addition to a fine.

Allan said the offence required a heavy punishment but wanted to wait until Friday for more information on Simpson's background.

Judge Fred Green handed out concurrent, three-month jail terms to a 59-year-old man who pleaded guilty to three impaired driving charges.

Valent Hacmanjek, of 948 Furber Road, received two three-month sentences and one 20-day sentence for offences March 15 and June 15.

Crown counsel Ken Salt said the first in the series occurred March 15 when an Oak Bay police officer followed Hacmanjek on Goldstream Road. Hacmanjek was stopped shortly after by Colwood RCMP and breath test readings of .20 and .18 were obtained.

The last two offences occurred on the evening of June 15. At about 7:15, Saanich police were notified by a citizen of an erratic driver. When they arrived, they found Hacmanjek slumped over the wheel of his car. Two readings of .20 were obtained and Hacmanjek was then released.

At about 10, Salt continued, Saanich officers stopped Hacmanjek at the intersection of the Trans Canada Highway and Wilkinson Road because he didn't have his headlights on. This time, the two breath test readings were .17.

They were the third, fourth, and fifth impaired driving convictions for Hacmanjek. He was convicted and fined $350 in June of 1972 and was jailed 15 days for the same thing in October of 1975.

Another drinking driver was fined $700 after pleading guilty to two impaired driving charges.

Eddis Leroy Fisher, 51, of 541 Winthrop, was fined $500 on the first count and $200 on the second, both occurring on Aug. 3.

Crown counsel Don Laughton told the court Fisher's vehicle was backing up in the 6600-block Sooke Road at about 8 p.m. and was involved in a minor motor vehicle accident. He was taken to the Colwood RCMP detachment where two breath test readings of .30 were obtained.

Police drove Fisher to his residence after he assured them his wife would drive the car home.

At about 9:45, officers had to return to the trailer park where Fisher resided to get more information for the accident report form when they noticed Fisher's car at a neighbor's home.

When police asked him how the car got there, Fisher said the neighbor had driven him there, but the neighbor denied it. Fisher was again charged and returned to the RCMP detachment where readings of .25 and .24 were obtained.

Probation for two over stolen items

Two Victoria men who pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property in separate offences were given suspended sentences and probation in county court Monday.

Judge Peter Millward ordered 12 months probation for Bradley William Harris, 20, for possession of a motorcycle and three months probation for Darwin Edward Theodore Smith, 18, for possession of a lawnmower.

Divorce rate up 2.4%

OTTAWA (CP) — The national divorce rate rose by 2.4 per cent last year from its 1977 level.

Figures released today by Statistics Canada show there were 243 divorces per 100,000 persons last year, compared with 238 per 100,000 in 1977.

The federal agency said 57,155 divorces were granted last year.

British Columbia had the highest divorce rate — 327 per 100,000 inhabitants. The lowest rate was 75 per 100,000 population in Newfoundland.

Other rates per 100,000 population: Prince Edward Island 111, Nova Scotia 233, New Brunswick 166, Quebec 237, Ontario 243, Manitoba 212, Saskatchewan 151, Alberta 310 and the Northwest Territories 177.

Henry VIII and placed on a naval gun carriage.

It was covered with a flag. On it rested the cocked hat Mountbatten wore as Admiral of the Fleet, his sword and the Gold Stick symbolic of his ceremonial role as a protector of the Queen.

Sailors, 122 of them in flawless formation, drew the gun carriage along. Behind it walked five royal princes — Prince Philip, Prince Charles, heir to the throne, the Duke of Gloucester, the Duke of Kent and Prince Michael of Kent.

Much of Canada lay asleep — it was 2:30 a.m. in Victoria — when the Royal Horse Artillery fired a 19-gun salute at 10:30 a.m. British summer time, to begin the procession through the streets.

Ahead of the coffin marched armed forces units from several countries, including 30 men of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

Lady Patricia Brabourne, their colonel-in-chief, lies injured in hospital, a victim of the same bomb which killed her father and mother-in-law and one of her 14-year-old twin sons.

She is a direct descendant of the original Princess Patricia — for whom the regiment was named — Lady Patricia Ramsay.

Canada's representatives were led by former governor-general Roland Michener.

The route blazed with uniforms, among them the burnished breastplates and plumed helmets of the Household Cavalry splintering the sunlight. But there were civilians too, the survivors of the World War II destroyer Kelly, which went down with guns blazing off Crete with Mountbatten on the bridge till the end.

Queen Elizabeth with the rest of the royal family waited at the Abbey with 1,400 other invited guests. In the congregation was the greatest assemblage of royalty since the funeral of King George VI in 1952. Among them were King Olav of Norway, King Carl Gustav and Queen Silvia of Sweden, Prince Rainier and Princess Grace of Monaco, Crown Princess Beatrix of the Netherlands, Grand Duke Jean and Grand Duchess Charlotte of Luxemburg.

Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher led the British government. Prime Minister Jack Lynch of Ireland was also there, both to attend the funeral and to meet with Mrs. Thatcher to discuss the strife in Northern Ireland that claimed its most illustrious victim with Mountbatten's murder.

Japan was not invited to send a representative to the funeral of its Second World War foe — apparently at his expressed wish, a Japanese diplomat said.

The Archbishop of Canterbury, Dr. Donald Coggan, Primate of the Church of England, conducted the ceremony and praised Mountbatten for his service to the nations of the Commonwealth. Cardinal Basil Hume, leader of Britain's Roman Catholics, joined in with a prayer for peace.

But the most dramatic moment came when Prince Charles, who idolized "Uncle Dickie," read the lesson from the 107th psalm beginning "They that go down to the sea in ships . . ." His voice was firm but his face clearly reflected his sorrow.

The body was then taken by train to Romsey Abbey, near Mountbatten's stately home, Broadlands, where it was buried facing the sea.

Heat pump is cheaper than hydro or oil in the long run

Fuel bills leave you cold?

50-years old, the heat pump finally catching on in Victoria

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Looking for an alternative to your oil-guzzling furnace but reluctant to get into solar power, wood stoves or all-electric heating?

The answer might just be a heat pump, a 50-year-old invention that started coming into its own about the mid-1960s.

Well-known in the southwest U.S., they are finally coming into demand here in Victoria.

Last year one dealer sold 85 of them — worth more than $300,000 — to energy-minded islanders expecting to recover their costs within eight years.

The burden of chopping wood or converting a house to solar-assisted heating discourages a number of energy-conscious householders, particularly if they are not handymen.

And for most conventional homes, the cost of electric space heating can be even higher than ever-inflating oil.

Heat pumps are really nothing more than a refrigerator or air conditioning unit with a fancy name.

In fact, the heat pump is designed to heat a home in cool weather and air condition it in hot weather, using electricity in the most efficient way.

It needs no fossil fuel and its two electric motors, which run a compressor and an air circulating fan, draw power conservatively.

Why does a heat pump work without using fuel to create heat?

The answer is simple — the atmosphere outside a building has warmth that can be recovered by expending comparatively little energy.

But because the heat in the atmosphere is dissipated, a day when the temperature is about 40 F. will seem cool to anyone stepping out of a 68-degree house.

A heat pump, in effect, squeezes the heat from a large quantity of outside air and concentrates it inside a structure.

An efficient heat pump requires only one kilowatt of electrical energy to extract 2 kw of heat from the atmosphere.

Its effective working range is between 35 and 75 F, outdoors, ideal for Victoria's climate.

How much money does a heat pump save?

According to Foster Air Conditioning, a principal supplier on Vancouver Island, a heat pump installed in a typical 1,200-square-foot house will cost $4,500 to $5,000 or about twice the price of an oil furnace and 2½ times the cost of all-electric heating.

But because of its efficiency, it will use 40 per cent less electricity than that required to run conventional heating.

Gary Crawford of Brentwood installed a heat pump in his new house three years ago and is about to spend his fourth winter in economical, maintenance- and dirt-free comfort.

It's a big house with 2,400 square feet on each of two floors and it has lots of glass and 12- to 14-foot ceilings. Its windows are double-pane and the structure is insulated to recommended standard.

Crawford says his total electricity bill last year came to $707 — for hot water, furnace, lights and a much-used all-electric woodworking shop.

To heat the house all-electrically would cost $540 by B.C. Hydro's estimate, not counting lights, hot water and other electrical load. Crawford guesses the heating cost in his electricity bill is half the Hydro figure.

"I'm extremely happy with it," said Crawford, an electrical engineer for the defence department.

He estimates his home would have required two conventional oil furnaces as well as chimney flues and a massive oil tank that would have pushed the price well over $5,000.

But his installed price for the heat pump breaks down to $2,400 for the unit itself — including the supplementary heating element and fan — and $2,600 for air ducts.

Bud Stanley, an engineer employed by Foster, has conventional oil heating in his house and installed a heat pump in conjunction with it.

He found he used about 10 per cent less fuel the first year and expects more improvement with a full season of operation.

The add-on pump costs half a full installation and in most cases, requires no new ducting.

The heat pump's refrigerating coils and compressor are located outside where air can circulate freely past them as the refrigerant gas expands.

When compressed, the gas becomes hot and a feed line carries it inside the house to a radiator in the furnace where interior air is circulated through it and into the room ducts.

In reverse, the warm air inside is cooled when the refrigerant gas moving in the opposite direction expands in the furnace radiator and moves back outside to be recompressed.

The system works ideally as a heat source in exterior temperatures above 35 degrees F. There is a balance point at which the efficiency drops and conventional heating switches on automatically by thermostat.

A heat pump can be installed by a do-it-yourselfer at a potential saving of $200-$500 for a typical domestic unit.

Foster president Les Virag says self-installed projects are encouraged, provided the individual is competent and agrees to work under supervision in order to protect warranties.

Wrong impression on park: Kool

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis is ill-informed and giving the wrong impression about Royal Oak industrial park, according to the project's driving force, Art Kool.

Kool, who owns 22 residentially-zoned acres next to the proposed industrial zone, has been working for four months to get the project going.

He says he stands to gain nothing from his efforts but personal satisfaction.

And Kool says Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis' sudden public opposition to the project is shocking because it is unfounded.

Curtis hasn't even tried to investigate the issue and rebuffs all requests for a meeting, he claims.

"It hardly seems fair that one individual can kill it. It hardly seems like democracy to me."

Curtis says he will convey his oppostion to Highways Minister Alex Fraser, who must approve the project. Saanich submitted it last month and expects an answer by Sept. 10.

Kool says he has no qualms about building homes next to an industrial zone because the park will be attractive and quiet.

Almost all property in the designated industrial park area is unsuited for residential use. It is noisy and hemmed in by highways, he said.

The project has been scaled down and modified since the original 120 acre proposal. The actual industrial park is now about 59 acres.

Contrary to claims by Royal Oak Ratepayers Association, the road system is adequate to carry any increase in traffic, Kool says.

The industrial park will be almost completely surrounded by careful landscaping and a 50- to 100-foot-wide buffer zone of trees, Kool said.

All development costs will be paid by the industrial park property owners.

The industrial park should more accurately be described as a business park, Kool believes, because there will be no air or noise pollution and construction will be strictly controlled.

Access will be available only to "image-conscious" firms such as distribution, warehousing and moving and storage companies.

These companies will be servicing the Greater Victoria area and have no interest in settling at Keating Crossroad, as suggested by Curtis.

About seven companies are negotiating property purchases and two are ready to buy once the industrial zone is created, according to Kool.

At least one of those companies will locate in Nanaimo if the project falls through, he said.

And he swears only one of 26 residents inside the industrial park zone is opposed to it.

Joan Hudson, who lives on 2.62 treed acres inside the planned industrial zone doesn't want to sell, but lots of others do, according to Kool.

Hudson has been offered more than $200,000 for her property, he said, adding that he has personally spoken to every resident.

Some older residents are anxious to unload their land at a good price and move to the city, he said.

Lunar eclipse looking good

Greater Victoria residents will have an excellent view of the lunar eclipse Thursday if the weather is clear, says a spokesman for Dominion Astrophysical Observatory.

But viewers will have to get up in the middle of the night to see it.

The total eclipse begins at 3:31 a.m. Pacific Standard Time and ends at 4:17 a.m.

The eclipse can be watched directly without fear of eye damage.

At that time me the moon will move within Earth's shadow. It will be the last total lunar eclipse visible from North America until 1982.

Easterners will not be able to see the moon completely in Earth's shadow because the moon will be setting and the sun rising before the end of the eclipse.

When Earth's shadow covers the moon, it appears as a rusty ball. It is never completely dark because rays of sunlight are bent by Earth's atmosphere and enter the shadow.

The last total lunar eclipse visible in most of Canada was in 1975. A total eclipse was visible from the extreme northwest part of North America in 1978.

Prison liquor caches seized at Jordan River

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Corrections officials are stepping up searches for liquor caches and homebrew stills at the Jordan River minimum security corrections camp seven miles west of Jordan River.

Guards Sunday found a cache of booze in the bush near a camp building and Sooke RCMP officers confiscated several cases of beer being brought in by visitors.

The cache consisted of two bottles of liquor and a canister of Tang mixed with some as yet unknown drug.

A small batch of homebrew was also found Monday night above a furnace and two weeks ago guards came across the remnants of a homebrew supply hidden in the bushes.

Guards fear a repeat of an incident in April, 1978 when inmates, drunk on homebrew, went on a rampage, burning down the camp's gym and causing more than $100,000 damage.

Acting director Frank Jamieson, second-in-charge at the camp — director Bill Dyke is on vacation — said today searches of visitors' vehicles will be increased.

Up to now, such searches have been made randomly every four to six weeks. In future they'll be made every week or two.

Jamieson said it is almost impossible to prevent inmates from getting their hands on booze.

The camp, able to accommodate a maximum of 40 inmates, is situated in a forest clearing overlooking Juan de Fuca Strait and has no fence around its perimeter.

Because of the fairly open access and the lack of sufficent staff to monitor the activities of all inmates, drinking has been a constant problem since the camp opened in 1975.

"Inmates here are supposed to be on their own behavior," said Jamieson. "It's left up to themselves for discipline. But sometimes the guys get carried away."

He said staff is always coming across small caches of liquor and stills tucked away in the woods, underneath buildings or secreted in furnace panels in trailers.

Often great ingenuity is used in planning stills. The one found following the April, 1978 incident was located under a floor board in a tool shed.

A tunnel had been dug out and a hose covered with earth led off to a nearby creek to carry away the smell of the potent mixture of rice and raisons brewing in a vat. The brew tested out at 13 per cent alcohol or three times the strength of beer.

Just about anything is used to make homebrew, he said. Favorites are tomato juice, canned fruit, rice and bread for yeast.

Guards have tried to bring the problem under control. Sugar now is kept under lock and key in the office and dispensed at the rate of five pounds a day.

Orders for food are checked regularly but because inmates are responsible for the kitchen and all food preparation, it is fairly easy to build up an inventory of brew-making supplies.

Jamieson said greater control could be achieved if there was a food control officer as there is at Wilkinson Road or Oakalla.

But even that wouldn't be the complete solution because the officer would only be at the camp seven hours a day, four days a week.

Jamieson said the drinking problem is something corrections officer are almost forced to live with.

Strike plan called off for lacrosse games

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers today said it has temporarily called off strike plans and will return to the bargaining table Monday.

The announcement ends the threat of a walkout which could have interfered with the Mann Cup lacrosse series.

"This is the first Mann Cup lacrosse series in Victoria in 22 years and we don't want to interfere with something as important to the community as that," said IBEW local business agent John Zettler.

The union is in a legal position to strike at any time but has agreed to withhold any action until after next week's round of talks.

The union and the city agreed to resume negotiations at 11 a.m. Monday.

Even if the talks are stalemated Monday, there would be no picket line action against the lacrosse series, Zettler said.

The fifth, sixth and seven games in the series, if necessary, are scheduled for Monday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

Athough there are only 15 IBEW electricians employed by the city, a picket line would be honored by the large local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Potential strike targets are Victoria city hall and the Johnson Street bridge where electricians are carrying out renovations.

Odds favor ticket dodgers

Got stung with a parking ticket recently and haven't got around to paying it yet?

Stall a little longer — the odds are favorable that the city might not catch up to present a bill.

A newspaper report from Vancouver on the weekend said hundreds of parking tickets are being cancelled there every month because the offending motorists can't be found or the provincial sheriff's office hasn't the time to deliver the necessary summons.

In a smaller way, it's the same in Victoria.

City comptroller Mason Sheldrick told council last month that there are 3,895 summonses relating to traffic fines which couldn't be delivered in the first six months of 1979.

Most were returned by the post office because the person moved and left no forwarding address. Some 1,587 summonses were returned as undeliverable by the sheriff's office.

Additionally, the city still has 1,768 summonses from 1978 making a total of 5,663 traffic fines ignored by drivers and a loss of revenue to the city of $56,630.

"It's not a lot when you take the percentage. We're issuing 125,000-plus tickets a year," said Roy Stewart of the city comptroller's office.

Traffic fines which were paid netted Victoria a total of $358,519 last year.

"The only thing that rankles me is these people are beating it and the honest guys are paying the fines," he added.

A motorist may escape paying, he said, but the city keeps the summonses in an active file.

You have seven calendar days to pay your basic parking fine, after that the $3 increases to $10. Ten dollar fines remain that after the week's deadline passes. Then the city sends out a form letter with a photocopy of the ticket.

If there is still no response, a summons is issued. The city waits about a month before taking this step because of the time and paperwork involved. An information has to be sworn by a police officer before a justice of the peace.

Next step is to get a bench warrant in provincial court for the physical arrest by police.

As an example, on Aug. 13, Stewart said, a dozen orders for warrants went out involving 36 tickets.

All of this is done in chasing offenders who can be traced. The summonses for those who can't be located go into a backlog at city hall.

If a new address turns up for a driver, Stewart sends the original summons over to city police to serve. But most of the backlog can't be worked on for lack of time and staff.

Sheldrick proposed that the city hire a temporary summons server for two months at a cost of $4,500 to clear it away.

Q. How old is the Canadian Teachers' Federation? M.B.

A. Four teachers, meeting in Winnipeg, conceived the idea of a federation for the western provinces in 1919. At an organization meeting in Calgary on July 19, 1920, two representatives from Ontario were also present and it was suggested support would also come from Quebec and the Maritime provinces. In view of this the Canadian Teachers' Federation was formed with an initial membership of about 9,000.

Three years for brutal $5 robbery

A 19-year-old Saanich man was sentenced in county court Monday to three years in the penitentiary for what both prosecution and defence agreed was a vicious and brutal attack on an 83-year-old woman.

Kelly Norman Lambert was given the same sentence as Wesley James Kennedy, 19, who also pleaded guilty earlier to robbery with violence before a different judge.

Judge Montague Drake said Monday the Dec. 3 incident was savage and if the offender was not so young would have resulted in a heavy sentence. He said he hoped that Lambert's maturing since the offence will continue.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang said both men entered the Victoria West home of Julia Knoll late at night. She surprised them and they attacked her, breaking facial bones and kicking her in the face. Three to five dollars were taken.

Mrs. Knoll, asthmatic, diabetic and with a heart condition, was confined to hospital for 18 days. Her health has since degenerated to the point where if there had been a trial in July, she could not have testified. While this was undoubtedly due to her age, it was also due to her ordeal, he said.

Victoria is a community with a great many defenceless older people who must be protected, Lang said.

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood said it was one of the most vicious and brutal crimes committed in Victoria but the question before the court was whether the sentence should be more than three years, three years, or less than three.

He argued in favor of a definite sentence of two years less one day and an indeterminate sentence for a longer period with conditions.

He submitted a psychiatric report which concluded Lambert is non-aggressive, easily influenced, not likely to repeat the offence and has the potential for being a well-behaved citizen.

He called seven character witnesses to support these opinions as well as Lambert himself.

Owen-Flood noted that Lambert has spent seven months in custody and told the court alcohol, drugs and bad companions are Lambert's problem.

He asked that he not be sent to the penitentiary which he called a finishing school for the worse.

Devastating power play fells Oaks

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Eight for eight is just perfect and that's how many goals Victoria Shamrocks scored on the power play in the opening game of the Mann Cup national lacrosse championships at Memorial Arena Tuesday night.

It was an awesome display of power and as a result the Shamrocks whipped the defending champion Peterborough Red Oaks 19-9 before 3,500 fans to take a one-game lead in the best-of-seven series that resumes tonight at 8 p.m.

Coach Ben Floyd of the Red Oaks was the first to admit that the extra-man play had been devastating.

"We took too many penalties," he said, "and now we have to find a way to stop their power play.

"But we'll study it and maybe we can find a way," he added. "We can play better than we did."

And it was a different power play than Shamrocks fans have been used to seeing that literally destroyed the Red Oaks.

Taking full advantage of the fact that he had three new (and very good) players in uniform in the persons of Doug Hayes of Burrards, Dan Wilson of Coquitlam and Wayne Goss of New Westminster, Munroe wasted no time in using the firepower at his disposal. Why not?

After all, Hayes had finished second in the WLA scoring race, Wilson third and Goss fourth and, in Munroe's view, Wilson is the best point man in the West.

Which is why he put them on the power play with the Shamrocks' own veteran Ivan Thompson and sharpshooting Kevin Alexander.

And although this group had never previously worked together, it was an instant success.

On the first Peterborough penalty after the Rocks had taken a 1-0 lead on goal by Larry Bell and weathered an infraction against Jim Lynch, Goss pulled the trigger.

A double penalty to the Red Oaks' Bob Wasson and Larry Ferguson opened the flood gates after Wasson had opened Peterborough's scoring and, in just 21 seconds the Irish had two goals and a 4-1 lead.

This they increased to 6-1 by the end of the first period and, with three quick goals early in the second, suddenly were enjoying a 9-1 edge and full value for it.

Stung by this turn of events the Red Oaks took over and ran in six of the next eight goals before the Rocks got back on track to hold a 13-8 lead after two.

The pace slackened in the third period with the Irish always having matters in hand and scoring five goals in the final six minutes, three from the odd-man play.

Which made the final power-play tally for the Shamrock shooters read like this:

Alexander: Five goals, three on the power play, and six assists, four on the power play;

Thompson: Four goals, three on the power play, and eight assists, four on the odd-man play;

Wilson: Eight assists, seven on the power play;

Goss: One goal and two assists, all on the power play;

Hayes: Two goals, one on the power play.

Alexander's five goals ran his playoff total to 39. It was his eighth hat trick which leaves him one behind Alfie Davy of New Westminster (1934) for that playoff honor. For Thompson and Wilson, their total of eight assists is believed to be a new Mann Cup mark.

Otherwise, while playing even, Bob Cool had three goals and one assist for the Rocks. Dan Green scored twice while singles went to Bell and Chris Hall.

Peterbrough scored two goals through their power play but mostly were thwarted by the Shamrock specialty defensive team as the Rocks took 12 minutes in penalties, compared to 16 by the Red Oaks.

Bob Wasson had three goals to lead the Peterborough attack, while singles went to John Grant, J.J. Johnston, Tom Parnell, Pete Guerin, Ron Ryan and Tom Patrick.

Goalkeeper Larry Smeltzer of the Shamrocks stopped 36 shots while Tim Barrie stopped 34 and Les Teatro two for the Red Oaks.

Cards, Pirates running hot

By Canadian Press

If the National League East is to become a three-team race, the next two days will tell the story.

St. Louis Cardinals, winners of five baseball games in a row and 14 of their last 17, have a chance to horn in on what seems to be a two-way scrap between Pittsburgh Pirates and Montreal Expos. They open a two-game series with the Pirates in St. Louis tonight, trailing by seven games — six in the loss column — after Tuesday's 6-4 victory over the reeling Chicago Cubs.

The Pirates, idle Tuesday, have won 24 of their last 33 games.

"We're two hot teams," said Cardinals manager Ken Boyer. "When two hot teams meet head-to-head, something's got to happen. Right now, with our winning streak, I'd have to say I couldn't feel better going into the series."

Expos, meanwhile, defeated New York Mets 5-1 to pull within two games of Pittsburgh and take a club record-tying eight-game winning streak to Chicago for a pair of games with the fourth-place Cubs, who have dropped five in a row and are 10 games out.

Elsewhere, the NL West is only a two-team battle — but what a seesaw battle. Houston Astros defeated Los Angeles Dodgers 9-4 and recaptured first place from Cincinnati Reds, who lost to Atlanta Braves, 7-6. The Astros and Reds have swapped positions four times in the last week. In the only other NL game, San Francisco Giants ended a five-game losing streak by defeating San Diego Padres 3-1 while Philadelphia Phillies, along with Pittsburgh, were not scheduled.

In the American League, meanwhile, veteran pitcher Jerry Koosman of Minnesota Twins felt rotten warming up before the game. Kansas City Royals didn't feel so hot afterwards.

"It's funny, when I warmed up I was wild and my rhythm was really off," Koosman said. "I told (outfielder) Glenn Adams when I got to the dugout that this was the worst I've felt in a long time.

But the veteran right-hander said he found his concentration — and his fastball — after the third inning and he went on to two-hit the Royals.

Minnesota won 5-1 and Koosman improved his record to 18-11.

In other AL games, Cleveland Indians downed Detroit Tigers 5-3, New York Yankees nipped Boston Red Sox 3-2, Texas Rangers stopped Seattle Mariners 5-2 and Chicago White Sox clipped California Angels, 10-7.

Canadian rowers win heat - Ford, Walter gain semis

BLED, Yugoslavia (Reuter) — Michael Evans and Timothy Britton-Foster of Woodstock, Ont., won their heat in coxless pairs at the world rowing championships today and advanced to Sunday's finals.

The Woodstock pair posted a time of six minutes 50.38 seconds, best of the three heat winners.

Bruce Ford and Pat Walter, Pan-American Games gold medallists from Victoria, finished third in their heat of the double sculls and advanced to the semi-finals.

Ford and Walter clocked 6:48.15, finishing behind Bruno Saile and Jurg Weitnauer of Switzerland, 6:37.60, and Bill Belden and James Dietz of the United States, 6:48.15.

Canada's coxed four, silver medal winner at the Pan-Am Games, placed sixth and last in its heat and will go to Thursday's repechages for a second chance at qualifying for the semi-finals.

The Hamilton Leander four of Dan Turton, Ron Cherwinski, Mel Laforme and Carl Zintal with Tony Biernacki as cox posted a time of 6:59.35 in its heat won by a Soviet Union boat in 6:33.53.

World champions Frank and Alf Hansen of Norway, rowing in one of the day's most competitive heats, covered the 2,000 metres in 6:37.13 to win their heat over an East German team.

Argos prove stubborn as Als take East lead

TORONTO (CP) — Montreal Alouettes beat Toronto Argonauts for the second time this season Tuesday night but they weren't forgetting they have to face the Argos again next Sunday.

After a 28-25 win that gave Montreal first place in the Eastern Football Conference, the Als were careful not to say anything that might rouse the Argos' ire.

"Toronto showed a lot of character," said Als running back John O'Leary who scored all three of Montreal's touchdowns on short runs.

"We had them down and we should've put them away, but we didn't," he said of Toronto's stubborn rally late in the game that brought the Argos from a 25-11 deficit to within three points.

The Als, now with a two-point lead over Toronto atop the EFC standings, will play host to the Argos next Sunday. The two clubs have a yet fourth meeting this Canadian Football League season set for Oct. 20 in Montreal.

Montreal, which beat the Argos 11-9 in their first encounter July 10, gave a crowd of 45,202 something to cheer about in the first quarter Tuesday night, handing Toronto its first touchdown opportunity with a pass interference penalty and then a field goal set up by an interception off Als quarterback Joe Barnes.

But after the Toronto touchdown, on a 10-yard pass by Tony Adams to running back Terry Metcalf, and the 39-yard field goal by Ian Sunter, the Als started their comeback.

Don Sweet started the rally by booting a 30-yard field goal early in the second quarter and then O'Leary romped for two touchdowns, from four yards and five yards to put Montreal ahead 18-10 at the half.

Montreal recovered Toronto's fumble on the opening kickoff return to start the third quarter and O'Leary was again within range, this time for a one-yard touchdown run.

After O'Leary's heroics, the Argos mounted their own rally, coming close with a second touchdown by Metcalf. An interception off Adams snuffed out another Toronto drive and set up another Sweet field goal, but Adams managed one more score — a five-yard touchdown pass to rookie slotback Dan Huclack in the final minute.

Ovett misses

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — British middle-distance star Steve Ovett came within one-tenth of a second of Sebastian Coe's world 1,500-metre record Tuesday night. Ovett clocked three minutes, 32.2 seconds, just missing his compatriot's world record of 3.32.1 set in Zurich last month.

Burnaby flashes power too

CALGARY (CP) — Five consecutive power-play goals in the second period ignited Burnaby Cablevision to an 18-7 triumph over Alberta Tomahawks in Tuesday's third game of the 1979 Minto Cup playoffs.

The victory for Burnaby was its first in the three-team round-robin national lacrosse final. Peterborough Century 21 Centurians are undefeated in two outings, while Alberta is winless in its two appearances.

John Swan, Bruce Turris and Dan McLenaghen paced Burnaby with three goals each while Wayne Hinada and Lyle Robinson added a pair.

Gord Roberts. Guy Prentice, Gary Purdon, Mike O'Reilly and Murray McRitchie were the other Burnaby marksmen.

Chris Skrobot and Paul Byrne had two goals apiece for Alberta with Guy Greene, Rick Noel and John Schneider scoring singles.

Perry walks out

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Put Gaylord Perry's quest for 300 victories on hold — for the moment.

The venerable right-hander, who told San Diego Padres 10 days ago that he wanted out, has walked out, vowing to retire if the club doesn't trade him.

"They said it takes time, I don't think they believed me," said Perry, 40, baseball's winningest active pitcher with 279 victories.

Perry announced Tuesday he was returning to his North Carolina home immediately and would give up baseball unless he was traded — preferably to Texas Rangers.

Padres officials, still stinging from a $100,000 fine for tampering, said they will ask baseball commissioner Bowie Kuhn to investigate the walkout.

"It's all a little suspicious," said Padres general manager Ballard Smith.

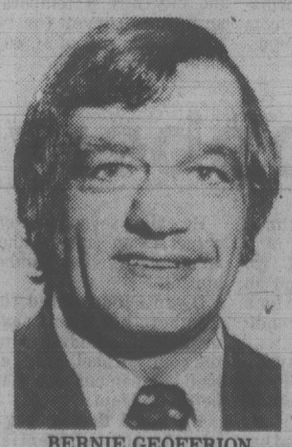
Coaching appointment . . . . . completes father-son act

Boom Boom back with Habs



BERNIE GEOFFRION
. . . realizing a dream

MONTREAL (CP) — It took 14 years, but former Montreal Canadiens right winger Bernie (Boom-Boom) Geoffrion has finally come home.

"I am realizing the biggest dream of my life today," said Geoffrion, after signing a three-year contract Tuesday to coach the Canadiens, a National Hockey League team for which he scored 371 of his career 393 goals.

Claude Ruel, who served as assistant coach under Scotty Bowman last season, will fill a similar capacity in the 1979-80 campaign.

Even after leaving Montreal at the end of the 1965-66 season to complete the final two years of his illustrious career with New York Rangers, Geoffrion admitted that he yearned " to finish my life and career with the Canadiens."

His name had been frequently mentioned, along with a handful of other candidates, as a possible successor to Bowman, who resigned last June to join Buffalo Sabres as coach and general manager. But it was not until last weekend that Irving Grundman, managing director of the Canadiens, decided to choose Geoffrion.

"I'm confident we have the right man for the job," said Grundman, of his selection.

The 48-year-old Geoffrion, who was voted to the Hockey Hall of Fame in 1962, after a career highlighted by winning the Art Ross Trophy as the league's top scorer in both 1955 and 1961, has not enjoyed similar success in his previous coaching duties.

After compiling 43 victories and three ties in 64 games as coach of the Rangers for part of the 1968-69 season, Geoffrion was forced to the sidelines with ulcers, a problem which recurred in 1974-75 when he was in his third season as boss of Atlanta Flames.

Apart from providing the Canadiens with the experienced, bilingual hockey man they were seeking throughout the summer, Geoffrion's appointment gives the club a father-and-son act to rival that of Gordie Howe and family with Hartford Whalers.

Geoffrion's 21-year-old son Danny, who played with Quebec Nordiques of the defunct World Hockey Association last year, became a member of the Canadiens when the NHL club exercised its rights to him last spring.

New approach set on riverside logging

A master's thesis completed last year by Keith Moore might remove most of the thorns encountered while making decisions on logging the margins of rivers and streams on Vancouver Island.

The title of the report — A Decision-Making Procedure for Streamside Management on Vancouver Island — says it all.

Moore, who is now working for the Fish and Wildlife Branch on the Queen Charlottes, completed the report under funding from the research division of the B.C. Forest Service and received help from numerous agencies, including the University of British Columbia, the Fish and Wildlife Branch, private companies, Canadian Forestry Service, federal fisheries and Council of Forest Industries.

So there was input from all sides.

Graham Archdekin, a forester attached to the Vancouver Forest District, has been evaluating the concept "to see whether the procedures will work" and his recommendations for a few minor changes are now in.

Moore writes:

"This booklet is a site specific guide to the management of streamsides on Vancouver Island for which logging is proposed. It should be considered as an aid for field level personnel to determine what logging practices should be used and how much vegetation, if any, should be left along the streamsides to provide for the requirements of non-timber users.

"The procedure deals with the maintenance of fisheries, wildlife, recreational, aesthetic and water quality values while harvesting timber. It does not deal with stream rehabilitation or stream improvement projects. Nor does it consider the trade-offs between resource values. However, it does provide information which may help to make those tradeoffs."

It does contain a cautionary note.

"Use of the procedure will allow for more streamside decisions to be made at the field level and will reduce the need for time-consuming joint field inspections.

"However, it may not deal adequately with highly-sensitive sites from a wildlife, fisheries or slope stability point of view and will not eliminate the need for, or the value of, joint field inspections on those sites."

The process does provide a means for identifying these sites and for communicating data about the sites and any potential management strategies.

The booklet guide to decision-making is broken down into two sections — one for streams with gradients of 20 per cent or greater and one for those with gradients less than 20 per cent.

The former are handled in a relatively simple manner, considering only the impact on downstream water users.

Lower-gradient streams are handled by a simple and logical step-by-step method of assessing the impact on several resources, including fish, elk, recreation, aesthetics and water quality.

The success of this decision-making procedure depends, of course, on the personnel collecting the data in the field and the relative importance they attach to each alternate value.

But it looks far more efficient than the current system and infinitely better than the log-and-be-damned methods of a few decades ago.

The system should be implimented at the earliest possible time.

Hull talks stalled

WINNIPEG (CP) — Winnipeg Jets' general manager John Ferguson says he would welcome a new voice in the stalled Bobby Hull trade talks.

"I don't mind if the league gets involved," Ferguson said Tuesday after announcing last week that trade talks with Chicago Black Hawks had broken down completely.

"I'm not interested in a mediator but I would like to hear another opinion. (National Hockey League president) John Ziegler would be fine."

Ziegler on the weekend said the league might step in to serve as a mediator in the dispute.

But Ferguson warned that he would stick by his position that the Hawks must come up with a player or players that can make the Jets' roster or offer future draft considerations.

"I won't just give Bobby away. I want a player who can play on my hockey club."

Borg-Tanner rematch commands more respect

Times News Services

NEW YORK — Two months ago it was billed as the brawny hayseed versus the stolid European champion.

It was Wimbledon, so that sort of matchup was wry and attractive.

But there is a new aura of respect surrounding tonight's rematch between four-time Wimbledon champ Bjorn Borg and his challenger in those finals, Roscoe Tanner.

This time it's the quarter-finals of the U.S. Open tennis championships, an event neither has ever won.

Tanner, long a top-10 player but never a big champion, extended Borg spectacularly at Wimbledon. Borg won it 6-7, 6-1, 3-6, 6-3, 6-4. But ranking up there with Borg's record-setting fourth title was the news that Tanner, at age 27, had made him work so hard for it.

The publicity attending all that has taught Tanner a lot.

"It's funny; you know, if he (Borg) is not playing well they say he's disinterested," Tanner said. "If he's playing well they say he's the iceman. I don't understand how that works."

After seven years of slamming away at each other, Borg leads their head-to-head competition nine matches to three, Tanner's last triumph coming in the quarter-finals of the U.S. pro indoor tournament last year.

And anyone who thinks defending champion Jimmy Connors has an easy match today because he's playing unseeded Pat DuPre hasn't seen DuPre play tennis lately.

In last year's Open, Connors eliminated DuPre in a tough third-round match. That loss was a confidence-booster for the 24-year-old from Anniston, Ala., who went on to the semi-finals at Wimbledon. DuPre came into this year's U.S. Open with one purpose — winning it all.

"If you don't come here to win but just to play well, you might as well not come," said DuPre, who outlasted seventh-seeded Harold Solomon 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 4-6, 6-4 Tuesday. It was DuPre's second straight upset. He beat No. 13 seed Gene Mayer on Sunday.

Today's other feature matches include women's top-seed Chris Evert Lloyd, gunning for her fifth consecutive Open title, against No. 5, Evonne Goolagong, and fourth-seed Virginia Wade of Britain against Billie Jean King, who is ranked ninth.

DuPre has no fears of Connors, who whipped Brian Gottfried, 6-2, 1-6, 6-4, 7-5.

"We've played four or five times and every match was close," said DuPre, who has never beaten Connors.

Tanner had no trouble with No. 14 seed Tim Gullikson, sweeping to a 6-3, 6-4, 7-5 triumph. John McEnroe, the third seed, easily disposed of unranked Tom Gorman, 6-2, 6-4, 6-1.

Lloyd, the top seed among the women, dropped a set in the Open for the first time in four years before defeating unseeded Sherry Acker, 4-6, 6-0, 6-2.

Third-seeded Tracy Austin was extended to the very limit to defeat No. 11 Kathy Jordan 4-6, 6-1, 7-6. Austin won the tiebreaker 7-5.

Elks fourth in B.C. meet

KELOWNA (CP) — Columbia Valley Kokanees of Radium won the British Columbia men's senior B softball championship Monday night by defeating Kelowna Sports Cougars 5-2. Kelowna had blanked Columbia Valley 3-0 earlier in the day to force a deciding game.

New Westminster Fraser Arms finished third and Victoria Elks-Athletics were fourth.

A's push series to limit

Victoria Athletics forced the best-of-five Heywood Men's Softball League playoff final to the limit Tuesday by blanking Capital Builders 3-0 at Heywood Avenue Park.

Bernie Talbot pitched a two-hitter for the victory while Jim Miller smacked a two-run double in the third inning and Dwayne Robinson bashed a solo homer in the fourth to provide all of the offensive power.

The game was called after five innings because of darkness and the deciding game has been moved up to start at 6 tonight.

Talbot struck out 10 and walked five.

Miller's double drove in Talbot, who had reached base on an error, and Bruce Kielbisk, who had tripled.

A glorious failure

LONDON (Reuter) — India failed gloriously in its attempt to win the fourth and final cricket test against England at The Oval, finishing just nine runs short of an historic victory Tuesday.

Set to make 438 in eight hours, 20 minutes, India reached 429 for eight to draw the match and concede the series to England, 1-0.

The record fourth innings total to win a test match is 406 and for much of Tuesday it was seriously threatened as opening batsman Sunil Gavaskar led India's challenge with a brilliant double century, his third in tests.

But after Gavaskar was fourth out for 221, the Indian run rate gradually lost momentum and England was able to cling to the lead it achieved by winning the first match of the series by an innings and 83 runs.

The second and third tests were both drawn.

Scores — England 305 and 334 for 8 declared; India 202 and 429 for 8.

South African rugby tour draws blast from Killanin

LONDON (AP) — The British rugby unions have refused to cancel a tour by a multi-racial South African team, and were immediately condemned by Lord Killanin, president of the International Olympic Committee (IOC).

The four British unions which control the game in Britain and Ireland rejected a request by the British government to call off the tour by the South African Barbarians team.

The Supreme Council for Sport in Africa has said it will press for Britain's exclusion from next year's Olympics in Moscow if the rugby tour goes ahead.

Killanin said in a statement: "Rugby is not an Olympic sport, and in Britain and Ireland has no connection with the National Olympic Committees.

"I believe this decision by the home rugby unions is irresponsible and unnecessary and could not be condoned by the Olympic movement, which withdrew recognition of South Africa where Apartheid continues in sports."

Killanin has no power to interfere with decisions by British rugby officials.

He did intervene last week and oppose a projected tour by the South African team of France, where the national rugby federation is affiliated to the National Olympic Committee.

Wright, Aldeguer win pairs

Basil Wright and Tom Aldeguer of the host club went into overtime to defeat Allan Jones and Peter Day of Gordon Head in the men's pairs competition for the Yarrow Cup at Canadian Pacific Lawn Bowling Club at the weekend.

Walt Ramsay and John Spink of Canadian Pacific won the "B" final against Geoff Macdonald and John Rose of Gordon Head while Peter Dunlop and George Konchak of Victoria downed Jim Baker and George McFarlane of Lakehill in the consolation final.

Argentina, Russ in final

TOKYO (Reuter) — Argentina and the Soviet Union advanced to the final of the world youth soccer championships with victories in their semi-final matches Tuesday. Argentina, with second-half goals by Ramon Diaz and Diego Maradona, beat Uruguay 2-0, while the Soviet Union defeated Poland 1-0 with a 49th-minute score by Igor Ponomarev.

GOALTENDING SWITCH

UNIONDALE, N.Y. (AP) — New York Islanders traded Swedish goalie Goran Hogosta to Quebec Nordiques for goaltender Richard Brodeur in a National Hockey League deal.

Canadians win openers

NEW YORK (CP) — Three Canadians won their opening matches in the United States open junior tennis championships Tuesday.

sGlenn Michibata of Mississauga, Ont., advanced to the quarter-finals with a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Carlos Castellan of Argentina and Martin Wostenholme downed Raul Viver of Ecuador 6-0, 6-2. Viver, the No. 8 seed, had beaten Wostenholme in a tournament in Toronto last week.

In women's singles, Karen Dewis of London, Ont., upset fifth-seeded Helga Leutten of West Germany, 6-3, 5-7, 7-5.

Stadium open to all races

PRETORIA, South Africa (AP) — Local authorities have decided to permanently open a rugby stadium, site of an upcoming World Boxing Association heavyweight title fight, to all races.

American civil rights activists, led by the Rev. Jesse Jackson, had urged blacks to boycott the Oct. 20 bout between South African Gerrie Coetzee and American John Tate because it was to be held in the ordinarily segregated Loftus Versfeld Stadium.

American fight promoter Bob Arum had secured a promise that the 85,000-seat stadium would be integrated for the fight, but Jackson said that was not enough.

The Northern Transvaal Rugby Union (NTRU), which owns the stadium, subsequently agreed to open it to blacks for all events, but the Pretoria City Council had the final say. Last weekend the council said it would not interfere with the NTRU's plan.

Thus far there has been no reaction from black militants in this racially segregated country to the council's decision.

City Archers take five B.C. titles

Victoria archers captured five titles in the annual B.C. outdoor championships at the Victoria Bowmen Range on Wilfert Road and at Juan de Fuca Recreation Area on the weekend.

Wanda Allan of Seaview Archers took first place in the ladies freestyle aggregate with 1,502 points, a margin of three points over Gerri Cosgrove of Victoria Bowmen.

David Sager of Seaview Archers finished first in the junior boys freestyle with 1,431 points. John McDonald of Seaview won the cadet boys freestyle event; Peter Sager of Seaview took the cadet boys barebow and Roberta Barker the cadet girlsfreestyle.

Dave Mann of Richmond, who was sixth in the Olympics, captured the men's freestyle aggregate with 1,551 points while Kevin Teitge of Seaview was second with 1,516.

Barr, Haldorsen head entry

The first entries for the 1979 British Columbia Open golf tournament, to be played Sept. 26-29 at Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club, have been confirmed.

And heading the list are defending champion Dave Barr of Kelowna and Dan Halderson of Shilo, Man., two of the three Canadians who have been enjoying good success on the United States Professional Golfers' Association tour.

The third Canadian on the PGA tour, Burnaby's Jim Nelford, may have to pass up the B.C. Open despite earlier hopes that he also may compete in Victoria. Nelford is due to defend his European under-23 championship in France and that tournament is in direct conflict with the B.C. Open.

In addition to Barr and Halderson, another prominent entry is Jerry Anderson, the youthful Toronto professional who won the Ontario, Quebec and Saskatchewan Opens earlier this year. Victory at Glen Meadows would give Anderson a sweep of the four largest Canadian provincial tournaments.

The B.C. Open, with a purse offering of $20,000, is the largest of the four.

Tournament organizers also announced entries have been received from Mike Daley of Montreal, John Colwell of Kingston, Ont., winner of the 1978 Simon Fraser Open at Prince George, and Terry Micolskzi of Toronto, who has been playing in Europe.

All the entries were phoned from Toronto after completed of the $100,000 Labatts CPGA Invitational at the weekend, won by Lee Trevino.

Parent on Flyer staff as goalkeeping coach

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Philadelphia Flyers announced Tuesday the appointment of Bernie Parent as a goaltending coach. Parent retired in June because of an eye injury. Parent will work with another former great, Jacques Plante, in coaching Flyers' goaltenders in the major and minor leagues. Named previously as new assistants to head coach Pat Quinn were Bobby Clarke and Joe Watson. Clarke will be a playing coach. Watson also was forced into retirement by an injury.

Chinese divers stage upsurge

MEXICO CITY (CP) — Two divers from the People's Republic of China raised a few eyebrows Tuesday by taking the silver and bronze medals in the women's springboard competition at the World University Games.

The winner was Irina Kalinina of the Soviet Union, an established international competitor, who collected 461.55 points. Chen Sho-sha was second with 446.79 and Shi Mei-quin placed third with 441.99.

"They just did a fantastic job and I was very impressed with them," said Marnie Tatham, the Canadian diving judge, of the Chinese girls. "I don't know whether they will be allowed to dive in the Olympics but if they are, they certainly will perform well."

The medals were China's first since its return to international competition after a 25-year absence and among the victims of the Chinese upsurge were the American and Canadian entries.

Denise Christensen, who won the event for the United States at the Pan-American Games last July, was fourth, followed by team-mate Barbara Weinstein. Elizabeth McKay of Pointe Claire, Que., finished seventh and Linda Cuthbert of Toronto, shattered by a poor opening dive, placed ninth.

The Soviet Union, with victories in fencing, gymnastics and swimming as well as Kalinina's diving triumph, pulled ahead in the gold medal table with seven after two days of competition. The U.S. had four, all in swimming, and Australia and Romania had one apiece.

Canada, with its best swimmers competing in the World Cup at Tokyo, was still looking for its first Games medal.

A sixth-place finish by Sue Mason of Halifax in the butterfly was the best Canadian performance in the pool.

Josef Brabenec of Vancouver won his second singles match in the tennis tournament, defeating James Ilako of Kenya, but Robert Bettauer of Vancouver lost a three-set match to Dick Metz of the United States. In women's doubles, Nina Bland of Victoria and Helene Pelletier of Quebec City also went down in three sets to a Korean pair.

TOP PICK IN FOLD

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Oilers of the National Hockey League signed defenceman Kevin Lowe, the team's No. 1 junior draft pick from Quebec Remparts, to a multi-year contract.

Arsenal, Palace maul cup rivals

LONDON (Reuter) — Two London clubs pulled off crushing 7-0 victories in the second-leg matches of English soccer's League Cup played Tuesday night.

Arsenal, holders of the older knock-out competition the FA Cup clobbered Leeds, one of England's standard-bearers in European competition this season, after playing 1-1 draws in the away leg and in a First Division match three days ago.

Alan Sunderland launched the Arsenal goal-rush in two minutes and finished with three. Irish stars picked up the other goals — Liam Brady (two penalties), Sammy Nelson and Frank Stapleton.

Across London, Crystal Palace, newly promoted to the First Division, slapped seven goals past Fourth Division Stockport. They, too, had brought a 1-1 result from the away leg.

Liverpool, the league champions held to a goalless draw by Tranmere Rovers in the first leg, stayed like that until the second half when Phil Thompson broke the deadlock.

Scotland's Kenny Dalglish chipped in with two goals and David Fairclough one for a 4-0 win.

The expensively remodelled Manchester City side scraped a 2-1 win over Third Division Sheffield Wednesday for a 3-2 aggregate. Despite the huge sums spent on buying talent, it was Tony Henry, a product of the junior team, who scored the second half goals which saved City manager Malcolm Allison from humiliation.

Leeds was not the only European aspirant to fail.

Ipwich, another UEFA Cup contender, played a goalless draw with First Division rival Coventry. Coventry survived by virtue of a 1-0 home leg win.

London clubs also made history after Third Division Wimbledon and Second Division Orient had played two 2-2 draws. Extra time failed to break the deadlock.

For the first time the rules this season stipulated penalties to decide, and out went Orient.

Borbon a biter?

CINCINNATI (AP) — Pedro Borbon has been sued for $115,000 by a nightclub bouncer who says the former Cincinnati Reds' pitcher bit him on the chest during a fight at a nightclub last May.

Aztec midfielder selected top rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — Midfielder Larry Hulcer of Los Angeles Aztecs was the North American Soccer League's Rookie of the Year, the league announced Tuesday. Hulcer, a first-round draft choice from St. Louis University, anchored an Aztec defence that allowed just 47 goals in 22 games, the third lowest total in the league. In one of the closest ballotings by a poll of players in league history, Hulcer barely edged out Branko Segota of Rochester Lancers and Perry Van der Beck of Tampa Bay Rowdies.

Gabriel resigns

SEATTLE (AP) — Jimmy Gabriel, a native of Scotland who coached Seattle Sounders of the North American Soccer League the past three seasons, has re-signed.

Gabriel, 38, coached the Sounders to the 1977 Soccer Bowl but Seattle missed making the NASL playoffs for the first time in five years in 1979.

A rugby test at UVic

University of Victoria's rugby teams will face tough tests right at the start of the new season.

The first division Vikings and second division Norsemen will entertain University of Bristol sides in an exhibition doubleheader at Centennial Stadium Sept. 23.

The second sides will square off at 1 p.m. while the first teams tangle at 2:30.

Victoria Cougars of the Western Hockey League will play Vancouver Canucks' rookie team in an exhibition game at Memorial Arena Sept. 27. Most of the Canucks players are expected to be assigned to the National Hockey League team's Central League club.

The parent Canucks have one exhibition already scheduled here — that against Los Angeles Kings on Sept. 24.

Canucks, meanwhile, announced the signing of goalie Ken Ellacott to a three-year pact.

Ellacott, 20, who, like incumbent netminder Glen Hanlon is slight at 5-8 and 155 pounds, was the Canucks' third-round pick in the NHL's entry draft. Ellacott played last season with Peterborough Petes, the current Memorial Cup champions.

Vancouver also signed defencemen John Hughes and Greg Hubick who have previous professional experience.

Hughes, 25, who signed a two-year contract, was originally drafted in 1974 by the Canucks who reclaimed him from Edmonton Oilers, and Hubick, 27, was signed as a free agent after being named as the most valuable defenceman last season in the Central Hockey League.

Still a juvenile, Wayne Walters already has made his presence felt in junior ranks at the Gorge Vale Golf Club.

Although he finished runnerup to Brian DeGirolamo in the club's junior championship, he was an easy winner of the juvenile title and also was named winner of the Thomas MacLeish Memorial Trophy, awarded annual to the Gorge Vale junior who donates appreciably to junior developement.

DeGirolamo won the junior event with a 72-hole total of 298, 10 over par. Walters finished 13 strokes behind while Gord Porter captured the low net championship.

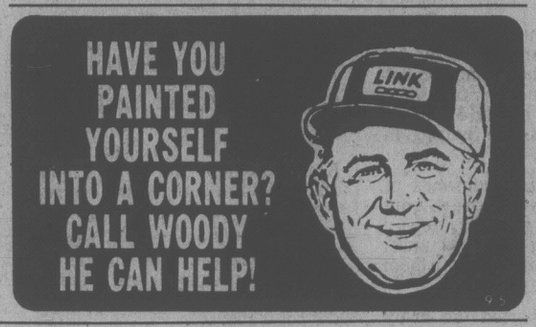
Thorburn repeats as snooker champion

TORONTO (CP) —Former Victorian Cliff Thorburn of Toronto edged world champion Terry Griffiths of Wales in final of the Canadian National Exhibition snooker tournament. The best-of-33 final, which covered two days, was decided by the last game, which the Canadian champion won. The win was worth $6,000 to Thorburn and Griffiths pocketed $2,000. For Thorburn, ranked No. 5 in the world, the win was his second in two years at the CNE.



Pro boxing revival predicted for Canada

EDMONTON (CP) — Professional boxing is "on the verge of a major resurgence in Canada," says Ron Hayter of Edmonton, who steps down this weekend as president of the Canadian Professional Boxing Federation.

Hayter said that in 1975, there were only 18 sanctioned boxing events in Canada but more than 35 boxing cards have already been held this year.

He named eight boxers who are characteristic of the "new look" in professional boxing: heavyweight champion Trevor Berbick of Halifax, light heavyweight contender Murray Sutherland of Brantford, Ont.; Commonwealth welterweight champion Chris Clarke of Halifax; lightweight champion Nicky Furlano of Toronto; middleweights Eddie Melo and Jim Gradson, both of Toronto, and Wayne Caplete of Winnipeg; and lightweight Gaetan Hart of Hull, Que.

Night of horror in a Chicago jail

CHICAGO (AP) — Thomas Wilson says he will never forget the night he spent in jail on speeding and drunken driving charges. His body will always show the brutal scars he says he received in the ordeal.

In a $1.5 million lawsuit, Wilson claims fellow prisoners at the Cook County jail used cigarettes to burn large pieces of flesh out of his chest, stomach and back.

"They were laughing and talking to each other as they burned me," Wilson said. "I thought, 'I am just in here for a traffic violation.' "

In the suit filed Tuesday in Cook County circuit court, Wilson, 29, alleges that the county was negligent because no guards came to his aid although he screamed and cried throughout the June 9 ordeal.

Bob Goltz, assistant director of corrections, called the allegations "bizarre."

"It is next to impossible" that a prisoner could have screamed for three hours without being heard by someone, Goltz said.

"If it was something that happened in five minutes, maybe. . . . But to hold him down for several hours? We are not at all convinced that this happened in the dormitory."

Dr. Milton Miller, who treated Wilson for his wounds, said he believed the man's story because the positioning of the wounds show it would have been impossible for them to be self-inflicted.

Wilson had been arrested that night on charges of speeding and driving under the influence of alcohol. He was placed in a dormitory of the jail and waited for a friend to come with $100 bail.

John Burns, Wilson's lawyer, said that when his client went to a washroom, several prisoners came up from behind, threw a sheet over his head and tried to rape him. The suit alleges the men punished Wilson's resistance with what they called the "test of fire."

"It was the worst pain I have ever felt," Wilson said. He crawled back to his cot, lay awake till dawn and was bailed out in the morning, he said.

Iran's troops claim Kurdish rebels on run

LONDON (CP) — Iranian troops with armor support have overrun fortified Kurdish guerrilla positions in the Khan Pass near Sardasht in northwestern Iran, state-controlled Tehran radio said Tuesday.

There was no independent confirmation of the claim. The Islamic revolutionary government controlled by Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ordered the closing Tuesday of The Associated Press bureau in Iran and the expulsion of four AP foreign correspondents working there.

The Tehran radio broadcast, monitored in London, quoted the commander of the Sanandaj division, Col. Iraj Sepehr, as saying the pass was "cleared of insurgents and occupied . . . with the help of armored units and ranger forces." His statement added: "We are in control of the situation throughout the region and the army is ready to advance towards other objectives."

No casualty figures for the government troops or Kurdish rebels were given but Sepehr referred to the pass as "an inaccessible fortified point," indicating there had been a fight.

If Sepehr's account is correct, it would mean government forces are pushing back the autonomy-seeking Kurds from their mountain strongholds around Mahabad. The government claimed its troops had captured the Kurdish stronghold of Mahabad on Monday and are advancing on Sardasht, 80 kilometres to the southwest and near the border with Iraq.

Regular army units and Khomeinis's paramilitary revolutionary guards, backed by tanks and combat planes, apparently now control much of the Kurdish area around Mahabad after several weeks of fighting in northwestern Iran.

It is reported that thousands of Kurdish guerrillas withdrew from Mahabad, taking their heavy weapons, including captured tanks and anti-aircraft batteries, with them into the mountains.

Tehran radio reported the army controls Mahabad and surrounding "sensitive points" but the city "has not yet fully returned to normal" because the rebels mined military installations and left behind booby-traps.

The Kurds have refused calls to surrender from the 79-year-old Khomeini, spiritual leader of Iran's Moslems and leader of the year-long revolution that toppled Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's government in February.

The shah had crushed several revolts by the Kurds in their mountainous region where the borders of Iran, Iraq and Turkey meet, and the Kurds had joined in the uprising against the monarch.

They took up arms again when Khomeini sent his revolutionary guards into the area to try and reassert central government control.

Tehran radio reported Premier Mehdi Bazargan went to see Khomeini at his headquarters in the holy city of Qom south of Tehran but did not elaborate.

Frenchman to orbit with Soviets in 1982 flight

STRASBOURG, France (Reuter) — A French cosmonaut is to take part in a joint mission aboard a Soviet spaceship, Hubert Curien, head of France's space research centre, said Tuesday.

Addressing a group of physicists, Curien said there have been several French applicants for the flight which will probably take place in 1982.

He said the successful candidate will have to speak fluent Russian as he or she will undergo intensive training with Soviet cosmonauts.

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev and French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing, who met in Moscow in April, agreed on the joint mission.

A spokesman for the space research centre said that during the flight, France hopes to study astronomy, space biology and the development of new metal alloys in weightless conditions.

Martial law extended by Salisbury

SALISBURY (UPI) — The Zimbabwe-Rhodesia government Tuesday extended martial law to cover all but one of the country's black rural areas and turned down a British request to release political prisoners so they could attend the forthcoming peace talks.

A government statement said Prime Minister Abel Muzorewa's Cabinet Tuesday rejected a request submitted by the British government on behalf of the Patriotic Front Guerrilla Alliance that some of its members now in prison be released so they could attend the constitutional conference in London.

The London conference will try to make Zimbabwe Rhodesia's acceptable to the Western powers and other African nations and to end sanctions against it.

It will also seek to end the bloody guerrilla war in which more than 25,000 have died and which threatens to erupt at any time into an international conflict.

The Cabinet said the request was made by the guerrillas leaders "merely for the sake of political propaganda" and rejected the request in the interest of national security.

The new decree leaves white-owned farmland as the only rural zones where due process of law still exists. An estimated 90 percent of Zimbabwe-Rhodesia's territory is now covered by martial law.

The country's two largest cities, Salisbury and Bulawayo, and several towns dotting agricultural areas occupied by whites were also left out of the government's new martial law decree.

Muzorewa said recently that less than 75 black politicians remain under administrative detention without trial. The government statement charged that Patriotic Front is holding thousands of black Zimbabwe-Rhodesians against their will in neighboring Zambia and Mozambique.

Senior military commanders said they had requested the extension of martial law because they expect an intensification of activities by Patriotic Front guerrillas coinciding with the peace conference starting in London Sept. 10.

Martial law was first introduced in September 1978 amid a public outrage over the downing of a civilian airliner by guerrillas and the subsequent massacre of survivors.

The imposition of martial law has enabled government forces to destroy property — at times entire villages — belonging to tribesmen suspected of having fed or harbored the insurgents.

The burning of homes in martial law areas, together with increasing pressure on rural blacks by the guerrillas, have prompted thousands of Africans to flee to urban centers to live in rapidly burgeoning shanty-towns.

Thousands reported butchered in Mongolia

PEKING (UPI) — Ultra-left party officials killed thousands of innocent people in China's Inner Mongolia Autonomous region during the early 1970's, the Communist Party newspaper Peoples Daily said Tuesday.

The article, placed at the top of the front page, said:

"Cadres (Communist Party officials) of the Chinese and Mongolian nationalities affected amounted to several hundred thousand. Dozens of thousands of them are dead. It wreaked unprecedented havoc in the Mongolian Autonomous region."

A wholesale effort to purge the guilty officials has been under way since, the article said, with many of them refusing to help right the wrongs they did.

"Some arch criminals in the fabrication of wrong charges not only have the effrontery to regard themselves as victims but openly challenge those in charge of straightening out the mess," it said.

The abuses are among the worse said to have occurred during the political era of the now widely-vilified "Gang of Four."

The "Gang of Four," which included the late party chairman Mao Tse-tung's widow, dominated Chinese politics during Mao's declining years, beginning around 1971.

They were arrested following his death in 1976, and are currently blamed for everything from technological backwardness to the poor quality of food in some restaurants.

In Inner Mongolia, the newspaper said, followers of the gang tried to consolidate power by provoking disturbances. They also staged show trials of party officials who disagreed with them.

"Veteran cadres sold-out their souls and joined in the fabrication of a large number of wrong and false charges," the paper said.

Events in Peking this year were marked by the presence of large groups of people from north and central China, including Inner Mongolia.

Often dressed in tattered clothing and sleeping in the streets, they said they were trying to get the central government to clear them or their relatives of unjust convictions on false charges.

Because of their "crimes", many said they lost their jobs, homes, and ration cards, and provincial officials have so far been either unable or unwilling to help them.

During a recent visit to Peking by U.S. vice-president Walter Mondale, about 300 of them staged a two-day demonstration in front of the offices of the Cabinet and the Communist party central committee on Changan Boulevard, Peking's main thoroughfare.

Some diplomats say there have been at least 100,000 of them in the city at some time during the year, but police call that figure exaggerated.

Weeping throng mourns panda

TOKYO (AP) — A seemingly endless procession of young and old, some with black armbands, many weeping, visited Tokyo's Ueno Zoo today to mourn Lan Lan, the 11-year-old female panda who died Tuesday.

The visitors offered fruit, flowers and a variety of gifts, messages of condolence and prayers. Some of the children carried panda dolls in their arms or on their backs, papoose fashion.

In the cage next to Lan Lan's, her nine-year-old mate, Kang Kang, languished alone. Occasionally he rose on his haunches and tried to peer into the empty enclosure.

"Kang Kang apparently is aware that Lan Lan is gone," said a zoo official. "He refuses to touch his food."

Lan Lan's death from uremic poisoning was headline news in Japan, particularly after zoo officials disclosed she was pregnant and probably would have given birth next month to the first panda cub born in captivity outside China.

Newspapers carried photos of the fetus, which was no bigger than a mouse.

Zoo officials said the existence of the fetus proved that Lan Lan and Kang Kang had mated last spring — the first successful mating after six years of failure.

Attempts to induce pandas to mate in captivity have proved unsuccessful in Washington, London and Moscow.

Zoo officials said that several times they asked the Chinese — who gave the pandas to Japan in 1972 to commemorate the opening of relations between the two countries — for advice on how to get the pandas to mate. The Chinese always replied: "The best advice we have to offer is patience."

Chinese officials have indicated they will try to provide another female panda to replace Lan Lan.

Rights violation charged

GENEVA (AP) — The UN Human Rights Committee has accused Uruguay of violating international human rights agreements through the arbitrary arrest, unfair trials and torture of three political prisoners.

The finding, issued last week, was the first conclusion on a private complaint ever published by the committee since it was set up by the UN General Assembly in 1966.

The charges by the 18-member committee were prompted by a 1977 complaint from Moriana Hernandez Valentini de Bazzano, a Uruguayan woman who lives in Mexico, on behalf of her husband, stepfather and mother.

Mrs. Bazzano's complaint said her three relatives were arrested in 1975 on charges of maintaining subversive contacts, then tortured and denied fair trials.

U.S. Saturn data snuffed by Soviets

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AP) — Space agency officials said they were trying today to salvage bits of scientific data that, after travelling almost 1.6 billion kilometres from Saturn, fell victim to accidental radio interference from a Soviet satellite.

About 45 minutes of data transmitted during the Pioneer 11 spaceship's encounter with the distant planet was lost because the satellite's transmission "was just completely drowning out our signal," project manager Charles Hall said Tuesday.

"The Soviets have been highly co-operative in avoiding such interference at critical times (during the mission)," Hall said. "NASA officials indicated they have no doubt the Soviets would have avoided the conflict on Monday if they had been asked."

They were not asked because the problem was not recognized in time, he told a news conference at the U.S. National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Centre.

Hall said some of the information might yet be recovered from computer tapes, but "I'm a little bit pessimistic right now."

Pioneer, meanwhile, was more than three million kilometres past Saturn today and sailing off into space at more than 32,000 kilometres an hour (20,000 m.p.h.)

Monday's brief communications loss was the only major problem to mar the ship's close encounter with the giant planet. Pioneer sailed to within about 28,000 kilometres (13,000 miles) from Saturn's yellow cloud-tops Saturday and came within 350,000 kilometres (220,000 miles) of Titan on Sunday.

Included in the missing data was a 15-minute transmission of the only temperature measurements taken of Titan.

Clark puts strings on international food aid

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is prepared to provide more grain and money to help shore up the world's food supply, Agriculture Minister John Wise annnounced Tuesday.

But Prime Minister Clark said this country cannot increase its total international food aid beyond the current level of $400 million annually.

The announcements, which did not explain the apparent contradiction in statements, came in speeches to the opening of a week-long session of the Word Food Council. The council, a United Nation's agency, is trying to develop policies to improve the world's food supply.

Wise said Canada will provide 600,000 tonnes of grain to the new Food Aid Convention which will help countries where there are food shortages. Previous governments have offered 490,000 tonnes.

The Conservative government will also set up a special fund of $2 million available to Third World countries to prepare agriculture development strategies.

Ottawa will also make a $5.5-million contribution to the International Emergency Food Reserve, set up to help countries whose food supply is damaged or ruined by disasters.

All three proposals will require Parliamentary approval. Officials were unable to explain how the government would spend $7.5 million on two new food aid programs while saying it had to hold its world food assistance at $400 million.

But the agriculture minister cautioned the council that Canada cannot accept a greater foreign role until it strengthens its own economy.

Clark said that while the developing countries sought greater assistance, Canada and other industrialized nations "face the difficult but not intractable problems of inflation, unemployment and erratic growth."

For that reason his government would maintain world food aid at the $400-million level. But aid would be increasingly tied to agricultural and rural development plans.

Clark said the council should give more emphasis at its next meeting to the fisheries "to gain from the sea a larger part of the ever-growing world protein needs."

"Canada considers that all developing countries engaged in fisheries or having such a potential should give this sector the highest priority."

Canada would share its "fisheries and agricultural expertise and know-how with developing countries wishing to attain food self-sufficiency."

Countries could also improve their food supply if they ensured adequate returns for their farmers and fishermen. "If all governments were to take measures towards implementing this concept, it would constitute a major step towards the removal of hunger."

Wise said a lot of Canada's expertise in dry-land farming is applicable to many developing countries.

Developing countries must increase their food production because the demand for grain will soon outstrip what North American farmers can produce.

Perhaps it was just the warmth of the day or a more-elevated classical allusion but whatever the motive, 13-year-old Rueben Kramer of Toronto was snapped taking his ease in the same pose as this replica of a Greek statue on display at Toronto's Canadian National Exhibition grounds. Mint firm facing misleading ad charge

EDMONTON (CP) — Franklin Mint Canada Ltd. of Rexdale, Ont., has been charged with misleading advertising following an investigation by officials of the consumer and corporate affairs department.

In provincial court Tuesday, a preliminary hearing was set for Dec. 3.

The charge, under the Combines Investigation Act, relates to an advertisement on stamp collection which appeared in The Canadian Magazine, March 20, 1976.

Officials of the department launched the investigation after receiving a local complaint.

Blackboard jungle fears rise in Metro

TORONTO (CP) — Fear of violence is increasing tension in Toronto's high schools, says a board of education report released Tuesday.

John Bates, a board official who wrote the report, said in an interview Tuesday that experienced teachers especially were concerned about potential violence.

"They do not think it is a problem now, but thought it could become one and felt the board should be doing something to allay fears before it became a problem," Bates said.

He said that during meetings at high schools last June, teachers said they were concerned about violence between groups of students, rather than between students and teachers. However, they refused to give him specific instances of violence.

High truancy and dropout rates also worried teachers who viewed the penalty of a suspension as inadequate.

"If a kid is truant, one of the few courses of action is to suspend him," Bates said.

"But teachers view it as a double jeopardy. What better punishment, the truant will think, than kicking me out of school?"

The report will be discussed by a committee of the board then circulated for public discussion. Bates will write a second report later in the year that will include recommendations to the full board for solutions to the problems.

Time running out: Inuit given warning

IGLOOLIK, N.W.T. (CP) — Canada's northern natives, who have lived in the Arctic since the dawn of recorded history, might be running short of time in their fight to preserve their culture through political self-determination, Bob Goudie, a federal government land claims negotiator, said Tuesday.

"Time does not stand still," Goudie said. "There is a lot of development going on in the North."

Land claim negotiations have been deadlocked for two years because the Inuit insisted on linking political development to land claim settlement, Goudie said in an interview.

The two sides have met five times in two years and have been unable to agree on a framework for a discussion.

Goudie was attending the Inuit Tapirisat of Canada's annual meeting. Tapirisat is a national organization based in Ottawa which represents the country's 22,000 Inuit.

While the issue over responsible government has been festering, multinational development companies, with Ottawa's blessing, have been intensifying their search for oil, gas and other northern mineral resources.

Goudie said he couldn't understand why the Inuit insisted on linking political development and land claims.

"I'm not an Inuit and I don't understand them."

This week, Northern Affairs Minister Jake Epp told a group in Yellowknife that the government was committed to northern resource development despite land claims from Yukon Indians, MacKenzie Valley natives and central and eastern arctic Inuit.

John Amagoalik of Frobisher Bay, who is running the Tapirisat vice-presidency, said both the territorial and federal governments are "waiting for us to crack from within."

Amagoalik was referring to a split developing between two Inuit factions at the annual meeting. One group favors a quick land claims settlement for money and the extinguishing of aboriginal rights while the other group favors long-term political development of responsible government.

Goudie said the Inuit should settle their land claims quickly to protect certain land from resource development and political development should wait.

"There is going to be responsible government in the North whether its territorial or Nunavut (proposed government north of the tree line).

Inuit leaders in a tug-of-war with the Northwest territorial government in Yellowknife for control of the Arctic are afraid that a land claims settlement without insurances of polititical control would leave them with less than they have now.

"We will have lost our only bargaining point," said Amagoalik.

The territorial government which is responsible to Ottawa has been calling for evolution of powers which would make its executive council accountable to the legislative assembly.

The legislature was recently increased to 22 from 15 seats despite protests by native groups and the NDP who argued that expansion should have awaited the outcome of land claim negotiations.

The territorial government also participates in land claim negotiations between the Inuit and Ottawa through a unilateral agreement with the former Liberal government.

Fire fears ease

FORT SMITH, N.W.T. (CP) — Cooler weather and the approach of winter has brought the 1979 fire season in the Northwest Territories all but to a close, John McQueen, N.W.T. regional manager of forest resources, said Tuesday.

Although there are 119 fires still burning, they are in low-risk areas, McQueen said.

Cooler weather throughout the Mackenzie Valley has produced a low fire hazard rating throughout the region, and with the approach of winter emergency firefighters hired to supplement regular seasonal and contract crews have been laid off, he said.

To date there have been 362 fires in N.W.T., with total losses estimated at over 3 million acres.

Wheat board for U.S.?

Farming Report

By Leo Quigley

There is a movement afoot in the United States to establish an American counterpart of the Canadian Wheat Board.

The movement stems from ever-increasing strength in U.S. grain co-operatives, demands by the American Agriculture Movement for "parity" wheat pricing and, more recently, the concept of trading a bushel of wheat for a barrel of oil.

There may be some merit to these ideas but American farmers should tread carefully before opening the door to increased government control in the form of a central grain selling agency.

The Canadian experience has been that the heavy hand of government does not wring a better price from buyers or improve deliveries of essential gain commodities.

A report, released recently by Foodwest Resource Consultants but commissioned by the Alberta government, shows that American farmers trading in a relatively free market have fared better in the price they receive for grain and their ability to deliver grain into the hands of buyers.

In fact, the report shows that farmers in Coronation, Alta., received 8.8 cents a bushel less than did farmers in Great Falls, Mont., despite the fact they benefit from an extremely low freight rate, market premium quality grain, and have a long-established policy of selling only "clean" grain — grain free from weed seeds and debris.

This does not speak well for government-controlled marketing, especially when the government marketing agency holds all the cards and is able to deal them at will according to trends and prices in U.S. markets.

Given this strategic advantage the Canadian Wheat Board should consistently draw a premium price for export wheat and put a bigger share of those dollars in the farmer's pocket through lower freight rates.

But the Foodwest report comparing the U.S. and Canadian systems demonstrates that even with these advantages the bureaucrats have failed to capture a better price for farmers north of the border.

Equally important, the report shows that the American grain transportation system, geared to serving only its own domestic markets until the mid-1950s, has responded to international marketing opportunities and delivered 80 per cent more export grain to market in 1978 than in 1972. In contrast the Canadian system, which has always been geared to serving export markets, has stagnated.

This failure in government planning and Ottawa's inability to solve our tansportation crisis is now costing western farmers — and the Canadian economy — billions of dollars in lost sales and penalties.

American prognosticators, meanwhile, are confidently predicting record sales volumes in the U.S at the highest price levels since 1975.

As a government agency, the Canadian Wheat Board was charged with two important responsibilities: to capture the highest possible price for Canadian farmers and to move grain to market efficiently. The Foodwest report shows the board has failed on both counts.

"We must conclude that the Canadian institutional policy associated with the Canadian Wheat Board and statutory Crow Rates do not provide any greater benefit to Canadians than does the less institutionalized price system in the United States," the report says.

To say the least, Foodwest has modestly stated its findings. What the consulting firm failed to recognize is that the average price the Canadian Wheat Board receives is artificially supported by sales to the Canadian International Development Agency.

While Canadian taxpayers may be reluctant to delve into the intricacies of intergovernmental purchasing, the fact is that food aid in the form of grain is bought from the Canadian Wheat Board by the federal government without tenders.

Since posted prices for wheat board grain are often unrealistically high during periods when the board has withdrawn from the market, sales to the Department of Supply and Services and CIDA for food aid are often made at inflated levels. The end result is the pumping of money from the public purse into wheat board coffers.

These contributions by taxpayers work to shore up wheat prices and camouflage the board's true performance as a selling agency. Without this transfer of funds into the board's grain pools the price differential between Montana and Alberta farmers would have been greater than described in the Foodwest report.

This secrecy in itself should be enough to discourage U.S. producers from adopting a similar selling agency. The fact that such a system in the U.S. could prove to be a costly exercise in bureaucratic bungling for both farmers and taxpayers should cause even the most ardent supporter of an American Wheat Board to stop and think.

UN tabs N.W.T. park site

VIRGINIA FALLS, N.W.T. (CP) — Places like Devil's Kitchen, Headless Creek, Dead Men Valley and The Hoodoos, to say nothing of scenic Virgina Falls, persuaded a UN agency to designate Nahanni National Park as a world heritage site.

Literally translated from the original Indian, Nahanni means "people over there far away."

The park is still far away, bordering on the inaccessible, but about three dozen persons, including federal Environment Minister John Fraser, were on hand as a plaque commemorating the occasion was unveiled Tuesday.

The Falls, twice the height of Niagara, are a major factor in UNESCO's decision to name the Nahanni as the first of only 12 locations to receive heritage site recognition.

The Nahanni River is described as one of the finest wild waterways in North America and UNESCO hopes it will be maintained in its natural state for the enjoyment of present and future generations.

Against a backdrop of the roar of Virgina Falls, Northwest Territories representative Robert Pilot expressed the appreciation of the territorial government for the UN's interest in the Nahanni area.

"We also feel honored that our Nahanni has been chosen as the first of hopefully many sites in the world to be given such august protection," he said during the unveiling ceremonies.

Dr. Bernd Von Droste, secretary of the world heritage committee of UNESCO, congratulated Canadians for the preservation "of one of their most outstanding national properties — Nahanni National Park."

Malone trial hears from boy

WINNIPEG (CP) — The trial of Richard C. Malone, former Winnipeg Free Press publisher, opened Tuesday with testimony that a juvenile boy had sex with Malone while another youth looked on.

Malone, 38, has pleaded not guilty to two counts of gross indecency in connection with alleged incidents in Winnipeg and Flin Flon, Man.

At the start of the trial before provincial judge Arnold Conner, Crown and defence lawyers agreed to submit a transcript of testimony heard at Malone's preliminary hearing before Judge Conner in July, rather than recalling witnesses.

The transcript was the only evidence submitted by Crown counsel Doug Abra. The defence called one of its expected two witnesses.

Malone, a lawyer, originally pleaded not guilty to a total of 10 charges but at the preliminary hearing pleaded guilty to two of the charges: buggery and attempting to obstruct justice.

Details on those offences have not yet been presented to the court. Judge Conner has postponed sentence on those charges until the conclusion of Malone's trial on the gross indecency charges.

At the preliminary hearing, the juvenile boy said he knew Malone from a July, 1978, party in Winnipeg attended by homosexuals. The boy, who was 14 at the time, said he went to Malone's home after the party and performed oral sex on him while another juvenile watched.

Another youth testified he was at the same homosexual party in July, 1978, and phoned Malone several months later from his home in Flin Flon, asking to see him.

Court was told Malone flew to the northern Manitoba town and met with the youth, who was 16 at the time.

RCMP had Malone under surveillance and when Malone arrived at Flin Flon airport May 4, a plain clothes RCMP officer, posing as an airport employee, gave him a ride to a hotel, which RCMP then staked out.

Later that night, equipped with a search warrant, RCMP broke into the hotel room and found Malone and the youth nude in bed. The youth testified he and Malone had oral sex.

The youth testified Malone was reluetant to have sex with him because Malone already was facing charges.

The only witness called Tuesday by defence counsel Frank Allen was Dr. Ted Gupton, director of the sexuality clinic at the Winnipeg Health Sciences Centre.

Dr. Gupton gave evidence on homosexuality in general and said that, based on U. S. and European statistical studies, confirmed homosexuals probably comprise four to six per cent of Canada's population.

He said homosexuality is a "fact of life" and has always been present in society. He said, "There are homosexuals at the ages of 15 and 15, and even younger."

Dr. Gupton said he "wouldn't be surprised" if about 90 per cent of the male population has been involved at some time in some form of homosexual act. He said he had no statistics readily available on this point.

Statistics dash currency rumor

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's reserves of foreign currency remained virtually unchanged at the end of last month at $4.27 billion.

At the beginning of August, foreign holdings were $4.24 billion.

Rumors were widespread during August that currency traders from the Bank of Canada were intervening heavily in international money markets to support the dollar, but government figures released today show little evidence of this.

The country increased its holdings of foreign currency by $36.7 million.

There was a $64.4-million increase in U.S. dollars on reserve, a $3-million increase in reserves of other foreign currencies, a drop of $100,000 in gold holdings and a decline of $24.5 million in holdings in International Monetary Fund (IMF).

Most of the shrinking of IMF reserves was a result of the weakness of the U.S. dollar on world markets. Holdings in the IMF are in a composite of the currencies of the major nations in the fund and a drop in the value of the U.S. dollar causes all members' holdings to lose value.

The moderate use of foreign currency reserves last month is an indication of the dollar's strength.

During the last month the dollar has increased in value by almost half a cent, closing Monday on international currency markets at 85.59 cents U.S. One month earlier, it was trading at 85.19 U.S.

Alta. widens fund loaning

EDMONTON (CP) — The blue-eyed Arabs of Alberta have opened their $5-billion energy nest called the Heritage Savings Trust Fund to big business.

Provincial Treasurer Lou Hyndman announced Tuesday that loans — minimum is $1 million — will be made to the private sector for the first time since the fund was set up four years ago.

The fund is fed 30 per cent of the province's resource revenue each year. Alberta's oil riches also make it the only province in Canada without a sales tax.

Hyndman made the announcement after unveiling the plan to the legislature's select committee on the heritage fund.

He said "competitive rates" will be charged on the loans. There is no ceiling on the amount to be borrowed, but Alberta will provide up to two-thirds of the debt financing of worthwhile projects.

Businesses borrowing money from the fund must show sound financial records and be active in Alberta so that fund money can "assist in the creation of new jobs," Hyndman added.

"Businesses which are not now located in Alberta but which indicate an intention to be active or have significant future operations in Alberta will be eligible for loans."

The opening of the fund to the private sector followed discussions in Calgary last week between Premier Peter Lougheed and Prime Minister Clark.

"The fund belongs to Alberta and I'm appreciative of the way the government has used the trust fund in the national interest," Clark said in Jasper, Alta., before meeting Lougheed.

Alberta has vetoed Ontario Premier William Davis' bid to have the energy revenue redistributed. Lougheed said Alberta's petro-dollars may be loaned, but not given away, to the rest of Canada. Alberta has already loaned about $300 million to other provinces.

While Lougheed's political opponents criticized the announcement, the business community — especially the oil industry — welcomed it.

"This program has clearly been set up to provide debt funding for future mega projects," said Opposition Leader Bob Clark, who repeated his call for legislative control over the fund, now managed by the cabinet.

NDP Leader Grant Notley said the program was "made to order for big business." He said Alberta should use the fund to obtain more ownership positions in businesses instead of settling for debt financing.

New NATO plane $60M 'headache'

ALERT, N.W.T. (CP) — Defence Minister Allan McKinnon says the former Liberal government saddled him with a $60-million headache — how to pay Canada's share of a new NATO plane this year without any money.

The minister said in an interview Tuesday on a flight to this northernmost settlement in Canada that he may be forced to ask NATO allies for a delay in paying Canada's contribution this year to the airborne warning and control system — (Awacs) — a series of flying radar platforms.

The previous government made a commitment to pay $60-million this year and $100-million next year to help buy 16 to 18 Boeing E-3A aircraft to join 11 British Nimrod planes in an Awacs system for Europe and the North Atlantic. But no money was set aside, McKinnon said.

"It is a real sore point with me that the previous government made a commitment with no money," he said.

Like former defence minister Barney Danson, the new minister favours Awacs planes for Europe. Awacs aircraft are also being considered for North American air defence.

McKinnon had visited the ballistic missile early warning system at an american base in Thule, Greenland, earlier Tuesday. The early warning system is part of the North American Air Defence Command (NORAD) radar network.

Canada and the United States are considering multi-million dollar improvements to the Pinetree radar and Distant Early Warning (DEW) lines in Canada. The two countries are also thinking of filling some gaps in the radar network with six Awacs planes.

McKinnon is on his first northern tour to "show the flag" in the Arctic. He is to wind up his three-day trip with visits to Spence Bay and Hall Beach, N.W.T., today.

Alert is an armed forces communications base on the northern tip of Ellesmere Island, about 830 kilometres south of the North Pole.

McKinnon said the former Liberal government authorized Danson to commit Canada to the Awacs system in Europe last December. But when the government produced its spending estimates before the May 22 federal election there were no funds for Awacs.

"We are left holding this big commitment with no funds."

He noted he could try to introduce supplementary spending extimates when Parliament resumes in October. But that would mean pushing it through a cost-conscious treasury board, which controls government spending.

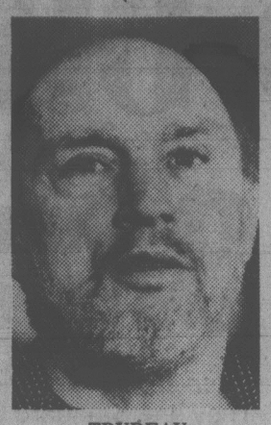
Federal, Que. Grits united



TRUDEAU
... positive role

MONT GABRIEL, Que. (CP) — Federal and Quebec Liberals will run a united campaign against sovereignty-association when the Quebec referendum is held in the spring, says Opposition leader Pierre Elliot Trudeau.

Speaking here Tuesday night at the opening of a three-day meeting of the Quebec caucus of the federal Liberals, Trudeau said there is no chance of a falling-out in mid-campaign between himself and Quebec Liberal leader Claude Ryan.

After several meetings with Ryan, he said, he arrived at the position "that we must first say no" to any referendum question put by the Parti Quebecois government of Rene Levesque.

"We must reject any imprecise and vague question that seeks to extend a mandate that is itself vague and imprecise," he said.

Trudeau said sovereignty-association is "nothing more than the choice of those who don't want to choose" and he said he can "almost promise" complete harmony between federal and provincial Liberals during the referendum.

In a 45-minute speech that dwelt mainly on the questions of national unity and the role of the Liberals in opposition, Trudeau urged MPs and senators to fight for a strong central government "that means something to all citizens" during the referendum period.

The central government must be more than the sum of the wishes of the provinces, Trudeau added.

In one of his few public appearances since the May 22 election, Trudeau said his "period of reflection" was over and the time had come to elaborate the role the Opposition party must play.

"We must propose just as much as reject," he said. "I hope that we won't play our role the way the Conservatives have for the past several years," saying the Conservatives were so afraid to propose things they became sterile.

Trudeau said the Liberal MPs should be positive rather than constantly trying to criticize or topple the government. He will give the government the chance "to show in which direction they want to take the country."

The Liberals will not try to bring down the government unless it feels that it is proposing "something fundamentally bad" for the country.

Traditional meatloaf takes on a new look and flavor as a Suburst Meatloaf

Riddle has a tasty answer

When is a meatloaf not a meatloaf?

That sounds like the type of riddle children love to spring on their mothers after school. But in this case you can puzzle your family for a moment with this question, then quickly present the mouthwatering answer. It's Sunburst Meatloaf Ring.

SUNBURST MEATLOAF RING

1 egg
½ cup water
4 tablespoons prepared mustard
1 tablespoon soy sauce
½ teaspoon salt
1½ pounds ground beef
1½ cups soft bread crumbs
2 tablespoons orange marmalade
Mandarin oranges, if desired

Lightly beat together egg, water, 3 tablespoons of the mustard, soy sauce and salt. Add ground beef and bread crumbs; mix lightly. Spoon into greased 6-cup ring mold.* Bake in 350° oven 30 minutes. Remove from ring mold; place on baking sheet. Stir together marmalade and remaining 1 tablespoon mustard; spread over loaf. Bake 15 to 20 minutes longer. Garnish with mandarin oranges, if desired. 6 servings.

*If preferred, shape meat mixture into ring in shallow baking pan.

MICROWAVE DIRECTIONS

Shape meatloaf into a ring in shallow glass baking dish, placing a custard cup or glass in centre of ring; spread with marmalade-mustard mixture. Microwave cook meatloaf on high 8 to 10 minutes (cook to 160° if oven has temperature probe).

A surfeit of vitamins

By JANE E. BRODY

NEW YORK (NYT) — The "one-a-day" multivitamin pill is a kind of nutritional insurance policy for millions of people, whether they need it or not. In recent years it's been eclipsed by megadose formulations of individual vitamins supposedly capable of performing health miracles far beyond warding off the well-know vitamin deficiency diseases.

But even as millions down a veritable alphabet soup's worth of vitamin supplements each day, confusion and controversy surround these nutrients.

There's only one fact about which there is no argument: Vitamins are essential to good health. But which ones, for whom and how much?

Vitamins are organic substances that are required in the diet in tiny amounts — altogether, less than an eighth of a teaspoon a day — to assist in your body's processing of other major nutrients, protein, fats and carbohydrates.

The amount of each vitamin recommended for daily consumption is based on how much is required to avoid any signs of deficiency in the average person.

However, a number of circumstances, including cigarette smoking, the use of certain drugs, various illnesses, old age, heavy use of alcohol, and pregnancy and lactation may increase a person's need for certain vitamins beyond ordinary recommended amounts.

Users of oral contraceptives, for example, need extra B vitamins — thiamin, niacin, pyridoxine and B-12 — and vitamin C. Heavy smokers need additional C and heavy drinkers require more thiamin, niacin, pyridoxine and folic acid than other people even if they eat otherwise good diets.

The elderly tend to absorb less of the B vitamins and Vitamin C and so may need to consume extra amounts. Persons with obstructive jaundice, bowel diseases or chronic diarrhea may absorb little of vitamins A, D, E and K.

Prolonged use of antibiotics can destroy the intestinal bacteria that normally produce several of our B vitamins and Vitamin K. Following surgery, illness, injury or extensive burns, the body's need for vitamin C is increased.

It is commonly asserted that anyone who eats a "well-balanced diet" doesn't need additional vitamins. Such a diet is described as including, each day, at least four servings of grain and cereal products, four or more servings of a variety of fruits and vegetables, two servings of dairy products and two of meat, fish or poultry. Although this particular balance of foods certainly does not offer the only way to consume adequate vitamins, it is considered a reasonable guide for the average person.

Obviously we don't all eat this way. For some persons such as those who eat erratically, who are on a strict low-calorie diet, who are picky eaters, who rely primarily on heavily processed and canned foods, or who are vegetarians, a diet containing adequate amounts of vitamins may not be consumed.

In these cases, supplementing the diet with a multivitamin pill may be advisable, although improving one's diet is the preferred route to obtaining essential nutrients.

If you do need a vitamin supplement, with the exception of Vitamin E, it matters not (except to the income of the seller) whether you buy "natural" or synthetic vitamins. The body can't tell them apart. A molecule of Vitamin C (ascorbic acid) is the same whether it originated in a rose hip or a chemistry lab.

A little spice for the brown bags

Kay Spicer

Back-to-school and back-to-work means back to packed lunches for many of us. Sometimes that meal can be a problem; a burden to prepare and a bore to eat. Let's see what we can do about it.

It concerns me because my son, Bob, takes his lunch to school every day. He's made his likes and his dislikes clear. Yes, he loves peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, also cheese and lettuce on brown and roast beef or chicken on white. No, he doesn't like carting containers or utensils back and forth. And, of course, he doesn't want anything too smelly, too sticky or too fancy in his lunch bag. Possibly you have the same restrictions.

It's a discouraging job, packing lunches, but I'm not going to let it get me down this season. Here are some of the tips, tricks and shortcuts I intend to put into practice.

There's no hard and fast rule that says the lunch must be a sandwich. I think these lunch-time menus will be a breeze to pack and a joy to eat.

Menu 1 — Sliced cold cuts. (wrapped in foil), buttered crusty roll, a whole tomato, a serving of bean salad in a little disposable container, a one serving can of chocolate pudding and a big oat meal cookie (at least for Bob). Also spoon, fork and serrated knife. (They can be wiped and kept in a plastic bag in desk for use again.) The knife slices the tomato, then the slices and the cold meat go into the bun for easy eating. The salad and the pudding can both be eaten out of their containers.

Menu 2 — Small can orange juice (chill over night in refrigerator), single serving can of salmon or tuna, lemon wedge (in plastic wrap), celery sticks, crescent roll or two, a rosy red apple and a cheese wedge. With this a fork and can opener must be packed. (The can opener can be parked in desk or locker for future needs.) The fish sprinkled with lemon juice can be eaten right out of the can. I'll pack this lunch the night before to chill it well before it takes off for school.

Menu 3 — Simple but satisfying! Small can of chilled tomato juice, crisp vegetables (in plastic wrap and chilled), tasty yogurt or cheese dip in a plastic container, small bag of corn chips, hard-cooked egg in its own shell, cracked wheat bread and butter sandwich, wedge of canteloupe and banana nut bread. Small containers of salt and pepper tucked into this one will help.

For sandwich lovers these make-ahead fillings are great. They keep well and are handy spreads for the brown bag bunch.

CHEESE-FRUIT SPREAD
(Makes about 2 cups filling)

- 2 cups shredded Cheddar, Edam or Gouda Cheese (8 ounces)
- ½ cup mayonnaise
- ½ cup chopped dried apricots

Cream cheese and mayonnaise together thoroughly. For a smoother spread beat with the beaters of the electric mixer or whirl until smooth in the blender or food processor. (This is speedy and cheese does not have to be shredded but can be cut into cubes to drop into the mayonnaise in blender or food processor container.) Stir chopped apricots into cheese mixture. (I like the fruit best when it is in little pieces but if you wish you can add the fruit to the cheese mixture in blender or food processor puree until mixture is smooth.) Pack into a glass or plastic container, cover and store in refrigerator. Keeps for 2 to 3 weeks.

Makes nice nibbling stuffed into pieces of celery. Variations: Add ½ cup chopped raisins, walnuts or olives in place of the chopped dried apricots.

CREAMY BEEF SPREAD
(Makes 2 cups)

- 1 pound regular ground beef
- 1 medium onion, finely chopped
- 1 4-ounce package cream cheese
- ½ teaspoon Dijon-style mustard (hot prepared mustard) Salt to taste.

Cook ground beef and chopped onion in a frying pan, stirring to break apart meat, until meat loses its red color and onion is limp. Drain off fat. Blend cream cheese and mustard together in a bowl. Add ground beef mixture. Mix well. Season to taste with salt. Pack into glass or plastic containers. Cover and store in refrigerator for up to 7 days; in freezer for up to 6 weeks.

Delicious on crackers or pumpernickel bread at snack-time. Slick Tricks: Stretch your sandwich spreads by adding lots of chopped celery. Weight-watching diners will be happy.

Hard cook enough eggs for the week's lunches while preparing breakfast or dinner. Refrigerate. Pack unshelled for best keeping. Remember to tuck in a little salt when an egg goes to lunch. Save money by buying large bags of pretzels, potato chips, corn chips, raisins and peanuts. Pack into smaller plastic bags for individual servings.

MEAT SALAD SANDWICHES
(10 double-slice sandwiches)

- 6 slices side bacon
- 1 cup chopped cooked ham or roast beef or pork
- ½ cup chopped apple
- ¼ cup chopped celery
- 1 teaspoon chopped chives, fresh or freeze dried
- ⅓ cup mayonnaise
- 2 teaspoons lemon juice
- 12 slices whole wheat bread
- Butter
- Lettuce
- Relishes

Cut bacon into small pieces; fry until crisp. Drain on paper towelling. Mix together bacon, ham, apple, celery and chives. Mix mayonnaise and lemon juice; toss through salad mixture. Spread filling on 6 buttered slices of bread. Cover with lettuce then top with remaining buttered bread slices. Cut diagonally; serve with relishes like radish roses, cherry tomatoes and dill pickles.

LUNCHEON MEAT FILLING
(Makes 12 double-slice sandwiches)

- 1 can (12-ounce) luncheon meat
- ½ cup chopped celery
- ¼ cup sweet pickle relish
- 1 teaspoon prepared mustard
- ¼ cup mayonnaise
- 24 slices bread

Grate luncheon meat on vegetable grater or chop for a few seconds in food processor or blender. Mix together celery, relish, mustard and mayonnaise. Add grated luncheon meat; mix thoroughly. Taste then add additional seasoning if necessary. Spread bread with butter or mayonnaise; spread filling on half buttered slices bread; top with remaining buttered slices. Filling will keep, covered, in refrigerator up to 3 days. Also sandwiches will freeze. This also makes a tasty filling for weiner rolls.

It's hard to beat special flavor of own vine-ripened tomatoes

Let us sing the praise of plant-ripened tomatoes, from balcony, home garden or allotment, for the more we eat the merrier we shall be.

Bright red, deep orange, large or small pear-shaped, or little round globes all are equally attractive to look at and the colors vary only a little in food values if ripened on the plants.

The sun-ripened or vine-ripened fruits are packed with plentiful vitamins and minerals all in perfect proportions to work together. And they are alkaline in reaction when eaten, not acid as so many folks believe.

This year our first fruits ripened earlier than average by one week. We picked red ripe Pembina fruits on July 25. These were followed by Fireball and Spitfire. Now, to assist the crop of developing green fruits we pick some of the largest as they turn a good salmon color to turn a deep red within 24 hours with comparable flavor of those plant-ripened.

As long as the family is eager for the fresh uncooked fruit, serve them in thick slices with salad greens.

Vary this by cutting tomatoes into small chunks and tossing with lettuce or other greens torn into small pieces, new green peas and hard-boiled eggs. With this serve homemade creamy yogurt sprinkled with paprika if desired, or with a chopped green herb as basil or chervil.

Small ripe tomatoes are packed into school and work lunch boxes so that their vitamins and minerals have not been lost by cutting the fruit and are still there to give support to the afternoon session of work. At-home lunches or at supper time, have a colorful bowl of washed tomatoes on the table. Have them at room-temperature for best flavor — not chilled as is the modern North American custom. You soon appreciate the difference.

See that each person has some of this fruit every day while at their best. Some families use a lot of tomatoes fried with bacon and sausages or other meats, but this is unnecessary work. Serve the thick slices of raw ripe tomatoes underneath, on top, or beside the cooked meats or on top of a lightly toasted cheese sandwich. They are delicious this way and far more valuable nutrition-wise and more easily digested.

Green Beans and Tomato Plate. Take a quantity of tender green bush beans or Scarlet Runners, enough for the number of servings. Slice thinly diagonally; cook in small quantity boiling salted water for 7 to 10 minutes, or only until beans are barely tender. They should still be slightly crisp.

Drain; keep liquid for soup for other use. Cool the beans while preparing tomatoes. Take one medium-size red ripe (or golden ripe) tomato or each serving. Skin and cut into chunks.

Toss tomato chunks with cooled beans.

Quick Dressing. Two parts sunflower oil to one part fresh lemon juice; a few grains salt and sugar (these are optional). Shake together or beat with fork in cup until well mixed.

Dribble over the green beans and tomato pieces. Serve at once.

To Make This into a Meal grate Cheddar cheese over top and surround with slices of hard-boiled eggs sprinkled with parsley.

Cheddar cheese may seem a luxury these days, but used with wholewheat bread and eggs it substitutes very well for meat occasionally. The cost for a serving is much lower than for meat even though the price by weight may be in the same range. Try to buy the Cheddar when advertised at a special price, as happens about once monthly at some stores.

To have sliced tomatoes with less sogginess in sandwiches. I have heard some women say they don't like home-grown tomatoes for sandwiches because the juice makes the breads soggy and the sandwiches cannot be handled from a lunch kit if made up overnight. Bought tomatoes are seldom ripe; they have little if any juice, and then have little color.

There is a way around soggy sandwiches.

With a sharp stainless steel knife, slice uppeeled tomatoes from top to bottom. Some of the softest pulp with a little juice will drop out, but much of the firm tissue will be intact. Put aside the soft pulp and juice to use later — pour it over a salad at home.

Cut the bread for tomato sandwiches a little thicker than for solid fillings and leave crusts on. Spread with softened "soft margarine" a type which is never really hard; fill all cracks and spread out to the crusts. Leave out the usual mass of mayonnaise, it makes a soggy sandwich even of an otherwise dry filling.

Sprinkle tomato slices with chopped parsley, chopped chives for green vitamins, or a green lettuce leaf on each slice of bread and put the tomato slices between two lettuce leaves.

Try these at home, making them early in the day for an at-home lunch. Make them carefully and you'll be pleased with the results.

Most of us have heard of cold coups but not everyone likes them.

Here is an Uncooked Tomato Soup which is a different thing entirely. I suppose it could even becalled a Liquid Salad if there was such a thing.

It does have a lovely fresh taste for a sunny fall day when you've been working or playing hard outdoors.

TOMATO SOUP
(Uncooked)

- 8 medium tomatoes (ripe)
- 30 mL sweet onion grated
- OR
- 15 mL chopped chives
- 1 mL salt (optional)
- Lemon juice, few drops
- 250 mL homemade yogurt

Scald tomatoes briefly; slip skins off.

Cut into small dice into a bowl. Grate onion, or chop chives, adding to tomatoes. Add salt; sprinkle with lemon juice. Stir vigorously with large wooden spoon to break down tomato pieces. Cover and set aside for 2 to 3 hours in cool place but not refrigerator.

Serve in small bowls or soup cups. Top with plenty of yogurt lightly sprinkled with curry powder if liked or chopped chervil or a touch of sweet basil herb.

The juice will have come freely from the cut tomatoes and the vigorous stirring will reduce the mass to a texture of thickish soup with a fine fresh flavor. The lemon juice helps to preserve the vitamin C in the broken down tomatoes by adding its own quota.

These suggestions will be a guide for your own thinking of other ways for using the healthful fresh tomato in its prime.

Late spring is sometimes called "hay fever season". While hay fever by itself is never fatal, it can be a cause of great discomfort to the person who has inherited it. Fits of sneezing, a stuffy and watery nose, and itching of the eyes are the most visible effects of this allergy. The sufferer may also experience breathing difficulties at night.

Repeated attacks of hay fever year after year can lead to some rather serious complications. About 30 per cent of the people with hay fever eventually develop asthma. Chronic sinusitus, which involves the inflammation of the sinus cavities, is yet another complication that can occur. The person with hay fever is best advised to see only one doctor, and to follow the advice of that doctor. Shopping around from doctor to doctor can compound existing problems.

Hay Fever is a free leaflet that supplies the reader with educational information on the topic. It's available from your Lung Association at the following address: B.C. Lung Association, 906 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Z 1K7.

Weeds add special touch

HAMILTON (CP) — To cut the food budget and liven up meals, try harvesting wild plants, says Lynn Dennis, a horticulturalist with the Royal Botanical Garden. Lamb's quarters, pigweed and dandelions can be turned into a gourmet's delight, he says, but stresses the importance of using a plant guide to distinguish edible from poisonous plants. "If you don't know what it is, don't pick it," he says.

Tips for sandwich lunches

"Brown Bagging" it is back in now that the kids are returning to school. It's also "in" for adults. The $2 lunch is becoming a rarity these days and many are opting to carry their own. If you do decide to join the tote-your-own group, there are a few points you should keep in mind to make lunches interesting, nutritious and free from potential food poisoning.

Mayonnaise has often been thought to be a food poisoning culprit. Not so. Mayonnaise itself is fairly acid which actually helps to slow down bacteria growth. It's the protein foods — certain meats (poultry, for example), fish or eggs that may cause the problem if they've been improperly cooled or stored. Freezing your sandwiches (they'll thaw by lunch time) or using cured meats such as bologna, corned beef, summer sausage, and so on, would be the safest bets.

You must keep hot foods piping hot in a thermos and cold foods cold (frozen sandwiches will help or use a freezer gel device). Food poisoning bacteria won't grow in foods such as peanut butter or cheese so they're always safe choices. But sandwiches can be boring so here are a few other tasty and nutritious lunch box suggestions to keep you feeling "full" until dinner:

—Cheese and crackers, cold chicken or meat loaf, devilled eggs, tomato halves stuffed with egg salad, Scotch eggs, dates or prunes stuffed with peanut butter, chili con carne, bean or chickpea salad.

—Dieters, try a tossed salad with ham and cheese or a spinach-mushroom-bacon salad (carry a lemon-herb dressing for adding later). This is great with skim milk, a muffin and cheese.

—Carry fresh fruit mixed with yogurt or plain cottage cheese, with tomatoes and cucumbers.

If you do like bread with lunch, vary the type you buy. Dark rye, 100 per cent whole wheat or oatmeal add bulk, B vitamins and fibre to your diet; or use crusty rolls, bagels or hamburg buns for variety. Calorie counters try bread sticks, melba toast, crackers or make open-faced sandwiches.

The lunch box possibilities are endless. Even the old standby of ham and cheese sandwich can be dressed up nutritionally by adding diced celery, shredded cabbage or carrot, bean or alfalfa sprouts.

Fruit nogs can be easily buzzed in a blender in the morning and poured into a thermos for lunch on a busy day. Blend together a small banana, an egg, 1 cup cold partly skimmed milk, 1 tablespoon honey. You've covered three of the four food groups this way — just add a muffin and you'll have a nutrition-filled lunch on days you have specific errands to run. You don't always have to carry milk — some of the new tomato or clamato juice combinations in cans are more expensive but they're delicious and nutritious. Freeze them ahead of time and they'll help to keep your other foods chilled. Pack raw vegetables for yourself and the children. Raw cauliflower, green beans, mushrooms, carrots, celery, radishes, are all good combinations that add crunch to lunch. Take along some plain yogurt for a dip and share with your co-workers. (Why not organize an office lunch pool?)

We don't need high calorie desserts for lunch. But for a change from the usual banana or orange, try a baked apple, some fruit salad, or dried fruit. Children love to find surprises in their lunches — (and the odd treat might stop them tossing the prepared lunch in the wastebasket at the neighbourhood mall). Pop in sunflower seeds, celery stuffed with cheese or peanut butter, a bag of unshelled peanuts, an oatmeal cookie.

Let the kids help with the lunch preparation. There is less likelihood they'll trade it for a friend's candy bar. Non-food surprises — a cartoon clipping, a note, a quiz or a crossword puzzle will keep lunch boxes interesting.

Lunch boxes are better choices than paper bags because they will hold the cold much better and are easy to keep clean and sanitary. Remember to include a serviette, plastic knife and fork (or keep a supply of all "extras" at the office) and you're all set to enjoy a hearty, healthy lunch.

NUTRITION MATTERS

Mucho deliciosa!

FLOUR TORTILLAS
500 ml all-purpose flour
5 ml salt
5 ml baking powder
15 ml shortening
175 ml warm water

Stir together flour, salt and baking powder. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles fine bread crumbs. Add water and mix until dough can be shaped in ball. Let dough rest 15 minutes. Divide in 12 portions and shape in balls. Roll each ball to an 18-cm round, on lightly-floured board.

Cook over medium heat in ungreased frypan until lightly flecked with brown (1 to 2 miutes per side).

BEAN AND CORN STUFFED TORTILLAS
CHILI SAUCE:
1 can (796 ml) tomatoes
25 ml chili powder
125 ml chopped onion
1 clove garlic, crushed
5 ml salt
2 ml sugar

Drain tomatoes; reserve liquid. Add remaining ingredients. Simmer, uncovered, until slightly thickened (30 to 40 minutes), stirring occasionally. Add reserved liquid if necessary.

FILLING:
25 ml chopped onion
15 ml fat
1 can (398 ml) refried beans
12 18-cm flour tortillas
500 ml (250 g) grated cheddar cheese
1 can (199 ml) kernel corn
250 ml chopped tomato

Saute onion in fat until transparent. Add refried beans and stir until heated through. Wrap tortillas in foil, reheat 5 min at 180 degrees C. Place about 25 ml bean mixture near edge of tortilla. Top with cheese, corn and tomato. Roll up tortillas, folding in edges like an envelope.

Place stuffed tortillas on baking sheet, seam side down. Bake at 180 degrees C until heated through (about 10 min.). Serve with chili sauce.

Makes six servings.

Jog down to your doctor first

YOUR HEALTH
by L. L. Coleman, MD

I've resisted the jogging fever for a long time. Now my friends have cornered me and I think I'm going to yield to their pressure. Are there any special precautions I should take? I'm 32, and used to be a pretty good athlete. For the past 10 years, however, I've done very little exercise. — Mr. V.

Dear Mr. V.:

Yours is but one of many letters that ask questions about this exercise phenomenon that has captured the imagination of people of all ages.

There is no denying that jogging is an excellent exercise for people in good health. However, the simple process of buying a pair of fortified running shoes, an attractive pair of shorts and a headband are not the only requirements for embarking on a strenuous program of jogging.

Running too fast, running too soon and running too long are producing a staggering amount of injuries to the muscles, tendons and ligaments of the feet and legs. Injuries to the bones of the feet, the knees and the pelvic bones have been reported among those who have entered the jogging program with too much diligence.

I believe that a good physical examination is essential before starting your jogging, in order to make sure that there are no underlying reasons why the jogging should be limited in any degree.

The jogger who is beginning and the jogger who is experienced should know that many physiological changes occur in the body during the process of running. The heart works faster and the entire vascular system is put under special pressures. The rate of metabolism of the body and the utilization of fats, carbohydrates and proteins is entirely changed by the new activity.

You've always impressed upon your readers the need for peace and tranquility at the dinner table. After a busy day, my husband and I occasionally enjoy a quiet dinner in front of the television. Can you help us do anything about the annoyance of television commercials that seem to be diabolically scheduled to blare their sales pitches about constipation, diarrhea, hemorrhoids and cockroaches during dinner time? And now comes the newest invader. A woman carrying a plateful of food that is "accidentally" slopped all over her chest in a disgusting mess. As a doctor, you must admit all of this cannot contribute to good digestion. — Mrs. L.R.,

Dear Mrs. R.:

I agree. I agree. I agree. I suppose that all we can do is to appeal to the good taste and good judgment of the manufacturers and advertisers and hope that they will recognize how disinterested and "turned off" television viewers can be with their poorly-timed, invasive commercials of such products at meal times.

Eat cauliflower hot, cold, now

Some like it hot, some like it cold — but no one likes it more than a week old.

According to food consultants at Agriculture Canada, success with cauliflower starts at the supermarket. The size of the head is not an indication of quality — a large head is equally as good as a small one. But the white flowers or "curd" should be heavy, firm and compact. And the jacket or outer leaves should be bright green and fresh-looking. A cauliflower head with loose flowerets or spotted, yellow leaves had definitely passed its prime.

Storing cauliflower is simple. Leave the outer leaves attached, and cut only a thin slice from the stalk. Given the best room in the refrigerator — the crisper — it'll stay fresh for a week.

Serve it hot or cold. On a relish tray, include cauliflower clusters with carrot sticks, radishes, cucumber slices and cherry tomatoes. Or make a crisp fall salad by tossing raw cauliflower with lettuce, crumbled blue cheese, onion rings and French dressing.

If you serve it hot, use the microwave oven. It's fast and simple. Cook it whole or in flowerets. In both cases, soak in cold, salted water 30 min before cooking. Place the washed and prepared vegetable in a glass baking dish with the required amount of water and cover with a glass lid. To a whole cauliflower, enough for six servings, add 50 ml of water and allow 11 min cooking time on HIGH in a 700 W microwave oven. For 2 servings, add 25 ml of water and cook for 6 min; 1 serving, 15 ml and 4 min.

Cauliflowerets are cooked much the same way, and you add the same amount of water. Allow 9½ min for 6 servings, 5 min for 2, and 3½ for 1. Stir the flowerets four times during cooking.

Whether you are cooking cauliflower whole or in flowerets, turn the dish a quarter of a turn four times. After cooking, allow 3 min standing time in the covered dish. The food continues to cook after it comes from the oven. Don't add any salt because it causes the vegetable to wrinkle and toughen.

Few vegetables are as attractive or as flavorful as cauliflower cooked until just tender and served without delay, with a light cheese sauce or melted butter and seasonings.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

Now Abby's reformed

DEAR ABBY: You stated in your column that in order for a man to convert to Judaism without circumcision he should find a "reformed" rabbi.

Abby, correction, please. We are not "reformed" rabbis. We are known as "Reform Rabbis". We in no way had to be reformed. OK?

RABBI YAVITZ

DEAR RABBI: OK. Oy veh! I stand corrected, which makes me a reformed columnist.

DEAR ABBY: I will try to make this short, but I have so much to tell that I could write a book.

I've been married 11 years. We have three wonderful kids. My husband has beaten me several times. Sometimes I had it coming, but most of the time I didn't.

The first time, he blacked my eyes and busted my jaw, which kept me home from work. I got out a warrant for his arrest, so he quit messing up my face. Then he started in on my stomach and breasts where the bruises wouldn't show.

Once he twisted my arm so hard that he broke it.

Finally, I filed for divorce. Then you never saw a sweeter guy. He begged and pleaded and laid his paycheque at my feet, so I took him back. He was so nice I was beginning to love him all over again.

Two weeks later he was accusing me of seeing other men. He pulled me all over the house by my hair trying to get me to confess. I had nothing to confess, but I yelled so loud the neighbors called the police, and now he's in the slammer again.

Should I let him rot there? His people tell me that my kids need a father, that Jesus forgave seven times seven and all that jazz, but I can't take any more of this. What should I do?

HAD IT IN

DEAR HAD IT: Your children may need a father, but they also need a living mother. If there is no hotline for battered wives, call a social worker and ask where a battered wife and her children can get shelter and counseling. And please write again and let me know how you are. I care.

DEAR ABBY: My son is marrying a girl from England, where the marriage and reception will take place. My husband and I will be the only ones from this side of the Atlantic to attend. We will have a reception over here for relatives and friends two weeks later.

My question: Would it be proper for the bride to wear her wedding gown at our reception? I had differences of opinions from people. Some say definitely not; others say as long as they cannot attend the wedding in England, they would like to see the bride in her wedding gown.

WONDERING

DEAR WONDERING: How does the bride feel about it? I personally find the idea charming and novel. The guests will love it, and the bride will get twice the mileage out of her bridal gown.

Exercise holds key to weight

Exercise is very important in appetite and weight control. When you're inactive, your appetite, normally a marvelous and precise guide to how much you should eat, doesn't work properly. In other words, you'll eat more calories than you actually burn, with a corresponding increase in weight.

This problem of underexercising is especially significant for children and teenagers. Studies show that excessive weight gains usually begin in late fall and winter and almost never during good weather. Overweight children spend a lot less time in physical activities than their slimmer friends. Likewise, the heavier children usually eat less, not more. So the answer here is to increase exercise, not decrease food intake.

The same thing goes for adults. The average caloric intake has decreased since 1900, but our problems of overeating have increased as the automobile has replaced walking.

Activities vary considerably in terms of energy costs. And moderate activities over an extended period of time are more effective than competitive sports. For example, walking works off about 5 calories per minute, cycling about 8, swimming about 12, and running about 20.

A pound of fat is equivalent, on the average, to 3500 calories. Even a surplus of only about 80 calories a day — a slice of white bread for example — can grow into 8.3 pounds of fat in one year. But those 80 calories could be used up by walking about 15 minutes a day, bicycling for about 10 minutes, swimming for 7 minutes or running for 4 minutes.

Remember that exercise does consume an appreciable number of calories, and if you're inactive, you still eat that small but, in the long run, deadly surplus each day. A brisk walk for 15 minutes each day over three months could burn away the caloric energy of more than two pounds of body fat.

FOOD QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Crow might stick in culinary craws

Q. The phrase "eat crow" has led to an office discussion. Is it possible that crow is edible? Or is it only a put-down for a loser?

A. I have never eaten crow, other than when it was used for humble pie. On the other hand Theodora FitzGibbon, in her often-quoted book, Food of the Western World (Times Books, 1976), states that "the crow, a member of the family Corvidae, is a large blue-back bird which is edible when very young. It is best skinned, filleted and made into a pie, although it can be used to flavor a soup which has other good ingredients."

Miss FitzGibbon is British, and I suspect that crow pie is more of a specialty in England than it is on this continent.

Q. In a cookbook on antique desserts, there are several recipes that call for rose water. Can I buy or make this, or can you substitute another flavor?

A. Rose water is a clear nonalcoholic liquid widely used in the cookery of the Middle East and Far East. Its customary use is in desserts. I have two bottles on my pantry shelf, one imported from India, the other from France. The French bottle lists as the ingredient distilled water; the bottle from India states that rose water is not only used in the kitchen but in religious rituals.

It is available in any Victoria pharmacy since it is commonly used as a cosmetic base

Q. I recently dined on raclette in a Swiss restaurant in Quebec. Can this dish be made at home without the electric appliance used in restaurants? Is raclette the name of the cheese used?

A. Raclette is, of course, a melted cheese preparation. In its original form, a half-wheel of cheese was held in front of an open fire, the cut side facing the heat. As the surface of the cheese melted, the cheese was scraped off onto small plates and eaten while still piping hot. It is generally eaten today with cornichons or small pickles and onions. The beverage for raclette is generally white wine or beer.

As time went on, charcoal-burning in a vertical grill replaced the open fire and, still later came electric appliances. The name raclette derives not from the name of the cheese but from the French word racler, meaning to scrape.

The cheese generally used for raclette is bagnes. One source for the cheese, as well as for raclette machines, is the Ideal Cheese Shop, 1205 Second Avenue, N.Y.. The cost of a large machine that holds half a wheel of bagnes is $249. The cost of a smaller machine that holds a fourth of a wheel, is $49.98.

Q. In a Southern novel that I read recently, the author mentioned "sweetmeats." Is this a traditional Southern food? And what is a sweetmeat?

A. As far as I know, there is nothing regional about the word, which strikes me as being a little antique. A sweetmeat is not a specific dish but refers, rather, to almost any dainty food, such as candy, which is made with sugar or another sweetening agent.

Q. In a recipe I want to make, one of the ingredients called for is a "chapon." Can you tell me what this is?

A. It could be one of two things. The word chapon is French for capon. It is also a piece of bread, generally a slice that has been rubbed with garlic. To make this, you would need a loaf of bread with a fairly firm crust and center. You simply slice the bread, cut a clove of garlic in half, and rub it gently but firmly all over the surface of the slice.

Sometimes toast is also used. At times also, the bread is sprinkled with oil andor vinegar. The chapon is added to a salad bowl and tossed with the greens.

You may be amused to know that the name chapon is a family-type joke in France. It means a large piece of bread added to a very watery soup. You serve the bread, previously dipped in poultry fat as a stand-in for a big fat capon.

Q. I recently inherited a small quantity of seeds in a glass jar. They were labeled celeriac and I presume it is a vegetable. Are you familiar with it?

A. Celeriac is another word for knob celery or celery root. It is a root vegetable that is, in its most popular form, cut into very fine slivers and blended with a remoulade sauce to prepare celeri-remoulade. It has, of course, the flavor of celery, but it is not the same thing as rib, or stalk, celery.

Marinades cut back on energy dished out

Of the total energy used in getting food from the field to the table, 30 per cent is used for food preparation in the home. This includes cooking, refrigeration and dish washing.

The kitchen is one place where the consumer has direct responsibility for energy consumption.

In season, fresh produce is the best energy-buy for products such as fruits, vegetables and fish. When locally produced, the energy cost of transportation is greatly reduced.

And when possible, serve the food raw for energy-saving, nutritious meals.

Marinating fall vegetables overnight and serving them on lettuce cups as a salad is time-, energy- and money-saving. It's a great way to use fresh fall produce and it leaves you free for last minute preparation.

MARINATED FALL VEGETABLES

- 250 mL broccoli, cut in 2 cm pieces
- 250 mL thinly sliced carrots
- 250 mL rutabaga, cut in thin strips
- 125 mL onion rings
- 50 mL oil
- 75 mL vinegar
- 25 mL sugar
- 5 mL salt
- 1 mL pepper
- 1 mL tarragon
- 1 mL garlic powder

Cook broccoli, carrot and rutabaga in boiling salted water until tender-crisp (3 to 5 min.). Drain and cool. Add onion. Combine remaining ingredients and blend well. Pour marinade over vegetables and refrigerate overnight. Serve in lettuce cups if desired. Six servings.

Fish fillets on green rice

A suggestion of sunshine along the Riviera is brought to the taste buds by the combination of herbs and flavors in this dish of fish and rice.

SOLE DEL SOL

- 2 pounds fish fillets (cod, haddock or sole)
- Salt and pepper
- 2 cups chopped onions
- 1½ cups chopped green peppers
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1 can (15 ounces) tomato sauce
- 2 cups dry white wine
- 2 bay leaves
- 2 teaspoons oregano
- 3 cups cooked rice
- 1 cup cooked green peas
- ¼ cup chopped parsley

Cut fillets in 1½-inch pieces. Season with salt and pepper. Set aside. In large skillet saute onions and green peppers in butter until tender. Add tomato sauce, wine, bay leaves, oregano, 2 teaspoons salt and ½ teaspoon pepper. Cook 20 minutes. Add fish and cook 10 minutes or until fish flakes easily. Remove bay leaves. Combine rice, peas and 2 tablespoons parsley. Heat. Toss lightly. Form into a border on platter. Spoon fish fillets in the centre. Sprinkle with remaining parsley.

Makes 6 servings.

Elaborate net system foils sharks

By JOHN F. BURNS

DURBAN, South Africa (NYT) — "Shaga!"

A few hundred yards off the Umhlanga Rocks beach, one of the most popular tourist areas on the Natal coast, Zulu boatmen erupted in a joyous shout as they hauled a net into the speedboat. Enmeshed in the polyethylene twine, dead, was a 9-foot, 400-pound female copper shark, its razor-edge teeth sharp enough to sever a human limb at a bite.

The shark, "shaga" in Zulu, swims in almost every sea, but few resort areas have the problem facing the authorities here. The 350 miles of the Natal coast, from Port Edward in the south to the Mozambique border in the north, are the habitat of a most prolific shark population.

Because Natal is the country's principal resort area, attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors each year from the arid stretches of the Transvaal and the Orange Free State, the province has established what is probably the most elaborate system of shark nets anywhere. Altogether, the nets protect more than 40 beaches and a tourist industry estimated to be worth at least $150 million a year.

Headquarters for the Natal Anti-Shark Measures Board, the agency responsible for the nets, is a modern building above the sea at Umhlanga Rocks, 15 miles north of Durban. From there a zoologist, Beulah Davis, manages a budget of nearly $1 million a year and a staff of more than 150, including 112 men from nearby Zululand who help maintain the nets, run the laboratory and prepare captured sharks for dissection and market.

The daily net inspections are a popular spectacle among tourists. Because of the heavy surf along much of the coast the 16-foot speedboats, powered by twin 85-horsepower engines, risk capsizing.

On a blowy morning Field Officer Mike Anderson-Reid had his craft leaping out of the water as it crossed the breakers. Although not strong swimmers, his five Zulu boatmen, their yellow southwesters glistening with spray, cheered with every lurch. About 500 yards offshore, the boatmen buckled down to the task of raising and straightening the nets.

Australia was the first country to use nets to protect its beaches from sharks, in 1937, but neither the Australians nor the Florida communities that followed suit established as elaborate a system as Natal. The first nets off Durban were laid in 1952, but it was not until the summer of 1957-58, when shark attacks killed five bathers along the coast and injured several more, that systematic protection of the coast began. Since 1964 the operation has been managed by the shark board.

Generally, the 350-foot-long nets are laid in an overlapping pattern beyond the surf, with up to a dozen covering a single beach. They are only 25 feet deep, leaving an average clearance of 5 feet between the bottom of the net and the ocean floor and 20 feet between the top of the net and the surface. It should be easy for sharks to swim through such large openings, but for reasons that are not fully understood, few do. Mrs. Davis theorizes that the sharks, with acute eyesight and a natural sonar system, can "see" the nets during the day and swim clear.

More than 1,000 sharks a year are caught in the nets, mostly between dusk and dawn, about half of them as they make their way out of the protected areas. Because sharks lack pumps to wash water through their gills, the organs that extract oxygen, they must continue moving to survive. Caught in the 10-inch-square mesh, they thrash desperately to swim clear, rolling the net around themselves. In minutes they are dead.

Although the shark board has more than 14,000 captures logged in its computer, the largest store of statistical data on the species, marine biologists know little about the shark's behavior, not even why it swims inshore. A common theory is that it does so in search of food or to mate. The food theory is supported by the sharp increase in net captures during the two-month sardine run along the Natal coast, when huge shoals of sardines swim inshore.

At most beaches swimming is forbidden when the sardines arrive. Warning signs also discourage bathing between dusk and dawn, although surfers are frequently seen along the Durban beaches until well past sunset. Some bathers have grown indifferent to the risks, apparently as a result of the shark board's success. Not a single bather has been killed during an approved swimming period on a net-protected beach since 1952, compared with 26 fatalities in the previous 25 years.

How menacing the sharks are is evident at the board's offices, where data on more than 17 species are stored, including the greatest killer of all, the great white shark. One recent fatality, an off-duty police officer attacked while scuba diving at an unprotected beach, was attributed to another of the most dangerous species, a tiger shark. Sharks captured in the nets have measured up to 21 feet long and some weigh over a ton.

If hoisted while fresh, the corpses are dissected in the laboratory, then sold. The fins, considered a delicacy by the Chinese, are shipped to Hong Kong, where they bring nearly $5 a pound. The skins are sold to tanners for handbags and other accessories, while the livers go for fuel oil, cosmetic substances and paint. The meat goes to pig farmers for about 20 cents a pound.

Kermit's kin protected by China ban

By JAMES P. STERBA
New York Times

PEKING — In a move that might moisten Kermit's Ping-Pong-ball eyes, the Chinese government has ordered a ban on catching, buying and selling frogs in most areas in an effort to protect them as insect-control agents.

Kermit the Frog is the puppet host of "The Muppet Show," which is popular on television around the world. He winces when humans mention eating frogs' legs, something the Chinese have done for centuries.

The ministry of agriculture, in an announcement reported in The Peking Daily, said there would be an extensive campaign in rural communes to dissuade people from catching and selling frogs. City dwellers, it said, would be urged to stop buying and eating them. Frogs' legs are popular in China, and the ban is expected to be difficult to enforce.

The ministry urged managers of state-owned markets to enforce the ban with more inspections. It also urged the foreign trade ministry to regulate state purchases of frogs for export in those areas where it is allowed, the cities of Peking and Tianjin, Hunan Province and Guangxi Zhuang Autonomous Region.

The government wants to reduce the use of chemical pesticides to save money and reduce pollution, so it has embraced biological control agents, such as spiders and predatory insects, as tools for controlling crop pests.

The ban on catching frogs was announced after letters and articles in the Chinese press reported a reduction in the frog population. One letter writer just outside Peking in Hubei Province said production teams sent squads to catch hundreds of frogs a day to feed their chickens and ducks.

"During the spring breeding season, men are sent to catch frogs in rivers, ponds and ditches," the writer said. "In summer, when frogs move into fields and are difficult for adults to catch, children are sent to catch them."

Toads, he reported, were especially victimized because they are slow movers. Wheat harvesters used to see dozens of frogs as they moved through the fields. Now, he said, a man could work for half a day without seeing one.

Citing the frog's voracious appetite for mosquitoes, another letter in China's Youth Daily urged parents and teachers to "educate and mobilize children to protect the frog."

The Agriculture Ministry's Plant Protection Bureau cited accounts going back to 304 B.C. of Chinese using frogs to control insects. It said stories had been told for generations about the frog's virtues, and it mentioned an adage, "Good officials protect the frog."

Tibet's Potala opened as gesture of goodwill

By FOX BUTTERFIELD
New York Times

LHASA, Tibet — In a fresco in the Potala Palace honoring the 13th Dalai Lama, there is a scene in which the high priest of Tibetan Lamaism appears to be riding in a gold-encrusted Packard sedan of the 1930s. The Dalai Lama, resplendent in an orange silk robe and high yellow conical hat, is portrayed beaming graciously to a welcoming crowd.

Asked to explain the painting, an official guide says that it depicts the 13th Dalai Lama's trip to Peking in 1908 to pay homage to the Chinese Empress Dowager, Tze Hsi, and the boy emperor who was soon to be deposed by the revolution of 1911.

The guide is not conscious of the picture's anachronism. Indeed, it is a small point easily lost in the magnificence of the chamber, which also contains a miniature pagoda made from 250,000 pearls and a 50-foot-high stupa, a towerlike Buddhist shrine, that is coated with 270 pounds of gold,

The whole room, including the ceiling and pillars, is swathed in silk brocade.

But the oversight of the guide, a pigtailed young woman wearing a Mao tunic, reflects what seems to be a pattern. She has a prescribed speech programmed to make a point, that Tibet is part of China. And her knowledge of the Potala does not go much further.

Indeed, the guide is a Chinese from Jiangxi Province far to the east. Under questioning she acknowledges that she cannot read classical Tibetan, the language in which the captions on the murals are written. Nor does she speak modern Tibetan.

In the hall of the fifth Dalai Lama she again points to a fresco showing a visit to Peking, this one in 1652. Asked whether any Dalai Lama ever visited another country, she says no.

A journalist on a tour of Tibet then points to a fresco that looks like a Dalai Lama on a pilgrimage to India. Where is that, the guide is asked. "I don't know, I'm not a Buddhist," she responds. In an aside to a Chinese official, she complains: "Why are these people asking so many questions?"

No lamas live in any of the Potala's 1,000 rooms anymore. It is a vast museum. At night only one or two lights flicker from its myriad windows, probably in rooms occupied by caretakers from the government's Bureau for the Preservation of Cultural Relics.

The Potala was reopened to the public earlier this year after having been closed since the Cultural Revolution of the late 1960s, the guide says. The move is one of a number of conciliatory gestures the Chinese government has made to dampen any lingering Tibetan discontent with Peking's rule.

Lhasa is 1,600 miles and several mountain ranges distant from the nearest Chinese city, and befitting its remoteness, it sometimes seems a little behind the rest of the country. Take, for instance, some of the slogans on walls here.

On the whitewashed side of an army barracks near the Drepung monastery is written, "Long live Chairman Mao!" Mao died in 1976 and similar wishes for his longevity disappeared long ago in the cities of China.

Nearby, another fading red-lettered sign proclaims, "Long live the Great Proletarian Cultural Revolution!" The Cultural Revolution consumed China a decade ago and has become an unpopular period that few Chinese want to recall.

A third slogan, across the street from the regional Communist Party headquarters, says: "Class struggle is the key link and everything else depends on it." That was an expression used to belabor Deputy Prime Minister Deng Xiaoping in 1976 before he was purged for the second time.

A special work group from the Communist Party's Central Committee has been visiting Lhasa, reportedly to check on some continued Tibetan agitation for independence from China and complaints by Chinese immigrants here over their prolonged stays in Tibet. Will members of the work group tell Deng what they saw on the walls when they return to Peking?

There are also many symbols of the new Tibet that has emerged since 1959 when the Chinese Army crushed a Tibetan revolt and imposed full control by Peking. One is the story of Lalu Caiwangduoji, a 66-year-old man with a refined courteous manner that betrays his aristocratic heritage.

Before 1959 Lalu owned 20 estates with more than 1,000 serfs and he was one of four ministers in the Dalai Lama's government. During the rebellion he became the commander of Tibetan forces in Lhasa, for the two days that they were able to hold out against the Chinese.

Then he was arrested and taken to a "mass struggle" session. It was there, he recalled over a dinner arranged by the local government, that "I learned the correctness of the Chinese Communist Party."

"When thousands of people shouted at me and waved their fists in my face, I expected to be executed," he said.

But instead Lalu was put into prison until 1965, and then for 12 years he planted vegetables at a labor-reform farm. In keeping with Peking's more moderate line, he has now been released and given an income of $130 a month, a sizable pension.

Now he has the worst police job

By CARL MOLLINS

KAMPALA (CP) — The jolting emotional leap from a comfortable post in Toronto into what must rank as the world's worst police job would surely have overwhelmed anyone with less low-key coolness than Andrew Barlow appears to possess.

Barlow is 39, a family man with three children and a pin-stripe taste in clothes that goes with his soft voice and conservative manner.

Until four months ago, the slight Ugandan was living the middle-Toronto life of a Canadian landed immigrant. he had worked for 18 months in the records office of the Ontario ministry of transport and communications, his only police connection providing vehicle and driver data to the Toronto force and the Ontario Provincial Police.

Now he is inspector-general of the Uganda national police, a force decimated and demoralized by eight years of neglect and defections under ex-dictator Idi Amin.

Yet Barlow and his puny force of about 2,000 undertrained men, down from an establishment of 13,000 are challenged to take on a daunting law and order assignment.

They are being asked to bring security to a post-war society imperilled simultaneously by marauding gangs of murderous thieves, the slightly-disciplined Tanzanian army that ousted Amin last spring, an unorganized Ugandan guerrilla force known as the liberation army and a rumored series of private armies.

In the security vacuum that followed the defeat of Amin, post-war policies duties fell to the alien Tanzanian force of 40,000 to 50,000, an army hailed last April as liberators but increasingly feared and resented by Ugandans.

Somz say the after-dark gangs tht kill and loot include Tanzanian soldiers. And they are blamed for the recent systematic slaughter of an estimated 10,000 wild animals in Ruewenzori park for meat and hides and ivory. Justified or not, the charges reflect resentment at the continuing presence of the Tanzanians.

If Barlow feels any resentment or rivalry, he buries emotion in his understated response to questions as he sits behind a desk covered in worn blue baize and knick-knackery, including a penholder bearing a plastic model of the CN Tower in Toronto.

He shows no anger even he describes the most personally painful of what he calls "the indiscriminate shootings" since April, the late-July murder of his brother and his brother's eitht-year-old daughter in their home.

"We have arrested some people for questioning, but there are some missing links in the case.

"His brother was the director of the school of dentistry at Makerere University.

He is as laconic when an explosive pop — like rifle shot — goes off during the interview below his fifth-floor office window in the ministry of justice.

"This is always happening," he remarks, as he looks down at four slouching Tanzanians in camouflage fatigues, guarding the gate to his police headquarters. But it may have been a motorcycle backfire rather than another casual or accidental discharge of a gun.

Barlow, a former assistant commissioner of the Uganda police, resigned from the force at the end of 1972 when it became apparent that, as he puts it, Amin "started to use the police for political purposes" diverting units for the torture and elimination of suspected opponents.

He fled in April 1977, was ambushed on his way to the border, was shot in the right leg as he escaped and made it into Kenya and a hospital. That fall, he moved to Canada. Last April, with the defeat of Amin, the Uganda National Liberation Front asked him to return and take over what remained of the national policy.

In the four following months his force has been unable to cope with the killings and lootings and has not even tried to deal with flourishing black markets in goods and currency.

But by the third week in August his white-uniformed constables were beginning to man highway security checkpoints, although Tanzanian troops stood by. A campaign for recruits brought "a tremendous response."

GETTING HITCHED IN STYLE was dream come true for Hedi Buck and Jim Sokalski of Mundare, Alta., 75 kilometres east of Edmonton, who didn't want any of that bicycle-built-for-two jazz.

Montreal to get $1M device which tells how brain works

MONTREAL (UPC) — The world-renowned Montreal Neurological Institute will accept delivery of a sophisticated $1 million device this fall that scientists expect will allow them to explore deeply the frontiers of the human brain.

"The main thing is that we will be able to get right inside the brain for the first time without surgery and see how it works, not just how it looks," said Dr. Lucas Yamomoto.

"Up until now, of course, we've only been able to scrape the surface of the brain with needles or x-rays without surgery."

The device, a Japanese-made mini-cyclotron, produces short-lived isotopes, radioactive tracers, that are injected into a vein or inhaled through a face mask with no risk or discomfort to the patient.

A halo of highly-sensitive detectors — part of an electronic scanning device called a positron emission topography system (PET) — around the patient's head picks up the radioactive signals as the tracers flow through the brain.

As the tracers are scanned, a computer prints out numerical or color scales of the density of radioactive material, checking the rate of blood flow, how fast the brain metabolizes glucose and other nutrients, to provide key information on the brain's condition.

The cyclotron, the second model made by Japanese Steel Corp., will be installed at the institute in November, giving its neurologists an important edge over U.S. scientists in the field of nuclear medicine and radio-chemistry.

The PET scanner, marketed under license throughout North America by Atomic Energy of Canada Ltd., already provides safe three-dimensional diagrams of the brain for patients suffering from strokes, epilepsy, tumors, dementia and other disorders caused by chemical changes.

But, Yamomoto said, x-rays alone are not sufficiently powerful to distinguish minor blood clots deep inside the brain from a small tumor because once the rays penetrate the skull they are absorbed by brain tissue.

The cyclotron, known as an accelerator because it energizes particles that have a life span of between two minutes and two hours, is scaled down to size and designed to make a minimum of noise so that it can be accomodated in a hospital environment.

Another practical advantage, Yamomoto said, is that the isotopes, produced in a self-shielding cylinder a metre and a half high, are derived from natural biochemical components — nitrogen, oxygen and carbon — and do not interfere with the chemical functions of the body.

Because of the isotopes' short life span, the cyclotron will be installed in a nearby basement and piped directly to the patient through a pneumatic tube.

The AECL said the United States was committed to spending $15 million for the purchase of both the $500,000 Therascan 3128 and the cyclotron for five hospitals and medical centers. Another 25 are reported to be considering the equipment.

One hospital in England has ordered the Therascan. The Japanese are spending $40 million on the combined system.

Poison-resistant pests now a 'sinister problem'

TORONTO (CP) — The rat scuttles across the floor and halts to nibble on the poisoned bait in the corner. You smile.

Soon the rat will die.

But the rat eats his fill and scurries away. He thrives, even grows. The rat is immune.

Slugs, crawling bugs and flying insects move across a field freshly sprayed with chemical poison.

The pests munch and move on, to repeat their ravage next year. The insects are resistant.

Clouds of angry mosquitos rise above the wetlands as an airplane dumps a load of chemical spray on them. The spray should kill the mosquitos and the malaria they carry.

Instead, the mosquitos settle to the ground again and live on, spreading the deadly disease. The mosquitos have developed resistance.

Rats, crop pests, and disaster-bearing insects which don't die when attacked with chemicals are on the increase around the globe.

Even some kinds of weeds are withstanding herbicides, living on the choked-out crops.

Superpests inhabit the earth. Will they inherit it?

The United Nations' 1979 world environment report warns that the resistance of pests to pesticides has become a "sinister problem," a perilous side effect of the proliferation of chemicals in our environment.

Each year, more than $5 billion worth of chemicals are used for pest control. With their help, food production in the world has almost kept pace with population growth.

But insects breed at an incredible rate — in the case of mosquitos, 20 generations in three to 10 years — and can rapidly develop resistance to the pesticides made to kill them.

"We've got problems now and they could get worse,' says Dr. Dick Frank, director of the Ontario agriculture ministry's pesticides residue testing laboratories in Guelph.

"We found cutworms 1,000 times resistant to DDT before we banned that chemical. But we're finding more and more examples now."

Since 1969, scientists have been fighting to control onion pests in the giant and fertile Holland Marsh, 40 kilometres north of Toronto.

"We're really facing the question now: Can we continue to grow carrots at Holland Marsh?" Frank says. If not there because of resistant pests, where else?

Dr. Floyd McEwan, chairman of environmental biology at University of Guelph, says cabbage, corn, apples, peaches and other crops are facing attacks of increasingly resistant pests in Ontario.

Occult may be passing from fad to respectable popularity

TORONTO (CP) — The occult, from spiritualism to extra-sensory perception to voodoo, seems to have passed from a fad to a more respectable popularity.

At the Toronto Spiritualist Temple, the tenets are indistinguishable from any other Protestant church except its members believe the communication with spirits in the Bible was far more direct than generally acknowledged.

"I was high Anglican myself for most of my life," says Jev. Roy Stoddard, the minister who provides messages from the dead for his congregation.

"But I always experienced things Anglicans wouldn't explain. To me, the Bible states the case for spirit contact very clearly."

Spiritual fulfilment is only one reason why people take to the occult. For others, like former pressman Doug Cottrell, it was the failure of conventional medicine to deal with a problem.

His daughter was born mentally retarded, and her doctors gave up trying to cure her severe convulsions and slow development.

Through the Association for Research and Enlightment, run by the foundation set up by famed American psychic Edgar Cayce, Cottrell says he developed his psychic powers and now is a full-time medium.

"Cheri-Ann has improved so much in the last few years. She can say a few words and doesn't have convulsions any more. The doctors had always told me this would never be possible."

For $100 a session, Cottrell serves a clientele that includes lawyers, doctors and university professors.

Richard and Tamarra are practising witches who recently opened the Occult Shop in Toronto. They sell books on how to make charms.

But the occult has its critics, including a group of scientists, science fiction writers and academics who call themselves the Committee for Scientific Investigation for Claims into the Paranormal.

New station in 26 languages

TORONTO (UPC) — The first day of broadcasting for CFMT began with film of a baby being baptized — an appropriate symbol for Canada's newest television station hoping to find an audience among new citizens.

The station, which intends to broadcast in 26 languages, devoted its first 30 minutes to 45-year-old Dan Iannuzzi, president of Multilingual Television Ltd., explaining the programming concept. Intermittent sound problems intruded.

The station will initially broadcast for a minimum of 96 hours a week. The bulk of the programming — 86 hours — will be in 24 languages other than English or French, aimed at the estimated two million people in southern Ontario who have neither official language in their background.

The station's signal will extend about 120 miles, easily putting it within range of Buffalo and upper New York State. "There's a large Polish and Ukrainian community there waiting for us," he said. "It's a kind of programming they don't have.

Iannuzzi produced a one-hour Italian-language program for the local outlet of the CTV network in the early 1970s before joining CITY-TV, an independent UHF station in Toronto, where he worked on ethnic programming.

Advertising sales are approaching $1.6 million — about 40 per cent of an estimated $4.1 million in revenue for the first year. However, the company expects first-year losses to be about $400,000.

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — Ligabue, a feature from Italian state television about a tormented artist, was awarded the grand prize Friday at the Banff film festival.

Canadian entries, which festival organizers thought would be greatly overshadowed by the international selection and big-budgeted U.S. productions, captured first place in two of the seven categories and won four prizes for second place among the 63 entries, reduced from 200 by a pre-selection committee.

The National Film Board documentary called Wood Mountain Poems, directed by Harvey Spak and produced by Tom Radford, both of Edmonton, received the first prize for the best documentary in the arts and culture category.

The film is about Wood Mountain, Sask., as seen from the perspective of poet Andrew Suknaski.

The CBC-Radio Canada production called Les Epreuves d'Alain was declared top television film for children, while The Devil and Daniel Mouse, made for television by Michael Hirsh of Toronto, came second.

In addition to being declared best film of the festival by the jury, which watched more than 70 hours of tape during the 10-day festival of television films which concluded Friday, Ligabue was judged best feature, which is a feather in the cap for director Salvatore Nocita.

Ligabue is the portrait of the artist as a social outcast and misfit, enraged, troubled, half-mad genius living in a series of adventures and misadventures.

Second place went to the ABC television network for the Jericho Mile, the story of a convicted murderer whose compulsion is running, an exercise in physical endurance that re-enforces his solitude.

The CBS television network won first prize in the serialized drama category with its series Blind Ambition, based on the personal account of John Dean and his wife, Maureen, of the Watergate affiar and how it affected them.

Second was the Canada-U.S. co-production of A Man Called Intrepid, the intricate and highly-regarded mini-series about the espionage network set up by William Stpehenson during the Second World War.

Scared Straight, by the U.S. Public Broadcasting Service, led the entries in social and political documentaries.

The CBC production The Dionne Quintuplets, directed by Donald Brittain and written by Pierre Berton, came second.

Afternoon Off, produced for London Weekend Television, was the top non-serialized drama.

The National Film Board finished second in the same category with Voice of the Fugitive.

Playboy? You bet!

LONDON (Reuter) — Playboy Enterprises has acquired a British gaming company in a deal that could make it the biggest casino operator in this country.

Victor Lownes, head of Playboy's British operation, said his company bought Norwich Enterprises Ltd., which owns the Victoria Sporting Club Casino, for about $13.2 million.

Norwich Enterprises, a private company, holds 50 per cent stakes in two casinos in Salford and Birkenhead, England. It also controls 56 betting shops, six bingo halls and two travel companies.

Playboy already runs two casinos in London and one each in Manchester and Portsmouth, as well as 17 off-track betting parlors in London.

Raw material exports growing

OTTAWA (CP) — Weakening economies in the United States and most other industrial nations appear to be locking this country more firmly than ever into its traditional role of supplier of raw materials.

A detailed breakdown of last month's disappointing foreign trade surplus of $77 million, released Monday by Statistics Canada, shows that the country's exports of raw materials have almost doubled since July 1978, while sales of finished products barely increased.

This is not surprising at a time when most of the country's major trading partners are moving into a period of slow or non-existent economic growth.

While they can afford to postpone or cancel plans to import Canadian manufactured goods, they must continue buying ore and fuel to keep their factories operating.

Latest trade figures show foreign sales of metal ores and concentrates, crude petroleum and natural gas increased by 81 per cent for the year ending July 31. During the same period, sales of equipment and machinery went up by 2.5 per cent.

A government analysis, accompanying the statistics, says raw materials continue to be the major source of strength in the country's foreign sales picture, a pattern which became evident early in the spring.

Industry Minister Robert de Cotret and his Liberal predecessors have said repeatedly that one of the government's main objectives in trade is to decrease reliance on raw material exports, for which Canada has earned the international reputation of a "hewer of wood and drawer of water."

Last month's figures, however, indicate the trend is in the opposite direction.

More than a fifth (21.3 per cent) of export sales in July were unprocessed materials, compared with 15 per cent in July 1978.

The proportion of semi-processed materials such as woodpulp, metal alloys, newsprint, chemicals and textiles remained approximately the same at 37 per cent. Food exports also remained stable at about 10 per cent.

But the contribution of end products — industrial machinery, agricultural implements and transportation equipment — to the country's total export sales fell to 30 per cent from 36 per cent one year earlier.

Most of this decline can be attributed to a slowdown in the automotive industry. Exports of cars and chassis declined by 17 per cent, truck exports were down 40 per cent and engine sales dropped by 31 per cent.

The decline in motor vehicle sales — which account for 60 per cent of the country's finished product exports — overshadowed the encouraging growth of two smaller exports, industrial and agricultural machinery.

These increased by 36 per cent and 79 per cent respectively compared with July 1978. However their combined value still added up to less than a fifth of fully-manufactured exports.

It was clear from the figures that the main source of trade difficulty is the United States market, which traditionally absorbs about 70 per cent of Canadian exports.

July sales to the United States were 20 per cent higher than for the corresponding month in 1978. But, during the same period, sales to the United Kingdom increased by 68 per cent, to the European Economic Community 67 per cent and to Japan 79 per cent.

The federal agency pointed out in its anaylsis that imports grew much more rapidly than exports last month. While sales abroad increased by seven per cent compared with their June level, purchases outside the country increased by 10 per cent.

The main factor behind the July import surge was a 60-per-cent jump in crude petroleum purchases compared with the previous year. Steel, coal and aircraft imports were also substantially higher.

By mid-year, the trade surplus was $970 million, about half the $1.8 billion surplus chalked up in the first six months of 1978.

Finance Minister John Crosbie has predicted a year-end trade surplus of $2.1 billion. Last year, the country had a record surplus of $3.5 billion in its merchandise trade.

The country's traditional trade surplus is always more than overshadowed by the foreign debts piled up by Canadians travelling abroad and by companies paying interest on money borrowed abroad and dividends to their foreign shareholders.

This so-called service deficit was about $8 billion last year. If it reaches a similar level this year and Crosbie's $2-billion trade surplus is realized, it would leave the country about $6 billion in the red in its accounts with the rest of the world.

SEMI-TRAILER jacknifed at Trans-Canada Highway and Bute early this morning, resulting in about $1,000 damage to truck and sending concrete mediam dividers across highway. Accident occurred about 6.30 a.m. and left only one westbound lane open until highways crews put things back in place. Police blamed slippery conditions for mishap but nobody was hurt.

Crisis talks for pilots

The B.C. Government Employees Union is meeting today with government negotiators in an attempt to settle an issue that caused government pilots to walk off the job Tuesday.

Provincial officials had to do without government aircraft as the 19 pilots held a one-day study session on flight safety.

Two crews stood by in case of any air ambulance calls.

Dick Lorett, spokesman for the pilots who are members of the engineering, technical and inspection component of the BCGEU, said the government is trying to eliminate some safety regulations from the union's master agreement.

The spokesman said the move is difficult to understand because government ministers would be most affected by the regulations.

But Mike Davison of the Government Employees Relations Bureau says that the union has misconstrued some suggested language changes.

"The concern is misplaced. Conditions for our pilots are completely safe," says Davison.

The BCGEU and the government reached a tentative settlement on a master contract late last month.

The two sides have set a deadline of Thursday night to reach agreement within the nine bargaining components. Any unresolved issues would then go to the principal negotiaters.

Ed Horanchuk, co-chairman of the union negotiating committee, says that safety issues could be a problem with other components, but would not give any details because both sides have agreed not to discuss negotiations.

Hospital costs audit

The provincial health department says it plans audits to determine costs for long-term care provided by private hospitals whose owners say they are losing money.

Assistant deputy minister Isabel Kelly said many private hospitals argue they are not making enough money but the health ministry has never investigated their actual running costs.

Last month, Pat Shields, president of the B.C. Private Hospital Association, said if the health ministry doesn't increase its payments to private hospital owners, members of his group might leave the province's long-term care program.

Kelly said in an interview that although the health ministry recognizes the right of private hospitals to make a profit, they provide only maintenance care and not the therapy given to patients in extended-care hospitals.

She also said there is a shortage of extended-care beds and the ministry is trying to expand its home care program to meet the needs of the aged.

"We're building new beds and upgrading existing beds," she said. "It will take at least three years to solve the problem completely."

Mt. Doug grad wins scholarship

A 17-year-old Mount Douglas secondary school graduate is one of four young B.C. women who have been awarded T.S. McPherson scholarships to the University of Victoria.

The scholarships are worth from $1,500 annually to a maximum of $7,500.

Danielle O'Grady, of 1604 Mileva Lane, a regular winner of Mount Douglas school's top academic awards, was also active in sports, clubs and student politics during her high school years.

The awards, established by the UVic senate and board of governors, honor Victoria pioneer and university benefactor Thomas Shanks McPherson, who died in 1962.

Applications for the prestigious awards came from 120 top students around the province.

Sixteen hopefuls were interviewed, but only four were selected. The other winners were from Delta, Kelowna and Salmon Arm. The scholarships are the first for first-time entrants to UVic which have a renewal feature.

If the student maintains a satisfactory grade level, the scholarship can be renewed up to five years or to graduation.

The bidding:

1◇	Pass	2♠	2♠
3◇	3♠	5◇

Opening lead — two of spades.

If you had the privilege of seeing declarer's hand during the play, you would presumably defend perfectly. Yet the fact is that even without this advantage it is usually not difficult to figure out declarer's hand and in that way locate the best method of defense.

Consider this deal where East cannot afford to play carelessly and expect to defeat the contract. Suppose he wins the spade lead with the jack and continues with the ace, as many players would do. Declarer ruffs, forces out the ace of diamonds, and easily makes the remaining tricks.

But if East is alert and returns either the king or a low heart at trick two, the contract goes down the drain. Declarer winds up losing a spade, a heart and a diamond.

How is East supposed to know that the seemingly dangerous heart shift is absolutely mandatory and that the "safe" return of the ace of spades is really unsafe? The answer is that there's an excellent reason for East to return a heart.

East knows from the bidding that South has the ace of clubs; without it he would not have an opening bid. East also knows that South has only one spade, since West indicated he had four spades by his fourth-best lead.

A spade continuation is consequently futile, because it allows declarer to discard his heart losers eventually on dummy's clubs. East therefore bases his defense on the hope that West has the queen of hearts.

This is not too much to expect for West's three spade bid and, besides, no harm can come from the heart return even if South has the queen. Accordingly, East leads a heart at trick two, in effect playing as though he has seen all 52 cards.

SOLUTIONS THURSDAY

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, September 6
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): What had been on the "back burner" will surge to forefront. Full Moon position emphasizes secrets, clandestine meetings, confidential data. Accept challenge and responsibility — you could be on brink of major discovery.

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): Lunar position highlights friendship that could be transformed into romance. Obtain hint from Aries message. Read between the lines. What you have been seeking could be handed you on proverbial silver platter. Pisces, Virgo individuals dart in and out of scenario.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Accent on prestige, honor and reputation. Don't duck major issues. Stand tall and firm for principles. Past obligation looms large — come to grips with necessities. Older person will become your ally. Know it and act accordingly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Grasp overall view. See picture as a whole, not in bits and pieces. Correspond, submit formats, advertise, publish and open wide lines of communication. You will finish a key project. Aries, Libra persons figure prominently.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Take lead, insist on an accounting. Those who initially opposed you could actually become allies. Money is involved. One close to you, perhaps partner or mate, confides financial plans. Stress independence, originality and courage of convictions.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Indecision could be an asset. Play waiting game. Refuse to be rushed into premature action. Cancer, Leo, Aquarius individuals figure in scenario. Partnership proposal deserves serious consideration. Be analytical, take nothing for granted.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Humor, versatility and ability to expand horizons — these are emphasized. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius natives play key roles. Accent on unique services, dependents and pets. Keep resolutions concerning health, nutrition and medical-dental appointments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Take advantage of openings, pounce on opportunities. You learn where you stand in special relationship. Be practical and realistic — protect self in emotional clinches. Member of opposite sex discusses issues in frank manner. Be receptive.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You'll have greater opportunity for self-expression within working schedule. Select quality material. Emphasize security, make move to close transaction. Eliminate safety hazards. You have right to be happier at home — and you will be.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Dispute with relative can be settled. Be flexible. If diplomatic you gain major point. Special call or short trip could be on agenda. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure in scenario. You could be recipient of unusual gift.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Full Moon emphasizes personal possessions, payments, collections and increased income potential. Perceive situations, places and people as they are, not merely through haze of wishful thinking. Define terms, check sources and be aware of financial past performances.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Full Moon in your sign highlights greater independence, confidence and ability to be at right place at right time. You're given opportunity to prove a special point — and you'll do it. Cancer, Capricorn individuals figure prominently.

IF SEPTEMBER 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY . . . you have harmonious voice, a tendency to be self-indulgent and a keen appreciation for art, music and literature. Members of opposite sex find you attractive and often "spoil" you. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. You are analytical and you are a survivor.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

We have 4899 for the game today. Two 9's, one 4, and one 8. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols, and no words. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also roots and powers (no extra digits). For example a solution for 50 is 49+9-8.

The limit without a break in continuity seems to be 113 in this fairly easy game. I shall be glad to check solutions.

Yesterday's answer: KNOT was 1637 (odd).

Soviets block 36 U.S. books

MOSCOW (AP) — The censorship controversy at Moscow's International Book Fair heated up Tuesday as U.S. publishers demanded that Soviet censors explain more fully why they have banned dozens of American books from display at the 75-country fair.

Alexander Hoffman, board chairman of the Association of American Publishers, also hinted broadly that the book seizures as well as Soviet visa restrictions might prompt the association to urge a U.S. boycott of future fairs.

By the time he spoke to Western correspondents at a news conference Tuesday afternoon, Soviet censors had confiscated 36 U.S. titles intended for display at the fair.

"We have met with the chief of the exhibition and questioned the reasons for withholding these 36 books — and we expect an answer tomorrow (Wednesday)," Hoffman said.

Among titles confiscated were sociologist Paul Hollander's comparative study, Soviet and American Society, as well as Ideologies and Illusions by Harvard's Adam Ulam and How Russia is Governed by Jerry Hough.

In some cases, the Soviet arbiters appeared strangely selective.

S.A. women pilots forced down, held

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Mozambique detained two South African women pilots as spies after their plane was forced down across the border by bad weather on the weekend, a radio broadcast monitored here said Tuesday.

The broadcast, from Maputo, the Mozambican capital, said Merle Ball and Jenny Louw were in nearby Machava prison. Their Piper Cherokee 188 was forced down in southeastern Mozambique, surrounded and searched by government troops, the report said.

Details on when and how the plane was forced down were not reported.

The Afrikaans newspaper, Die Vaderland, quoted friends of the women as saying authorities in Maputo described Mrs. Louw, a registered commercial pilot, and Mrs. Ball, a mother of three, as spies and racist pigs who would be made to pay for violating Mozambican air space.

Victim freed, 'badly treated'

OLBIA, Sardinia (AP) — British businessman Rolf Schild staggered into a police outpost early today and said he had been badly treated by kidnappers who are still holding his wife and daughter. Unconfirmed reports put the ransom demand for them at $25 million.

Schild, 55, told police his abductors led him on a horse before releasing him near the village of Bultei on Tuesday night. He said he took a bus to another village, Bono, and police drove him to Oblia.

"Part of the way I was put on a horse, I don't know why but probably to make sure that I do not trace the way back," Schild told police.

Schild was in "very poor condition," long-haired, unshaven, with chapped lips, and cold sores, said Associated Press photo editor Gianfranco Jacopozzi, who saw him in the national police station in Olbia.

Police officials said the German-born electronics engineer was wrapped in a blanket and appeared exhausted.

Schild was examined in Oblia by a doctor, who prescribed some medicines and rest, police said. He also met with his Italian lawyer, Gianfrao Cualbo, who refused to discuss possible ransom demands with reporters.

Schild disappeared with his wife Daphne and 14-year-old daughter Annabelle on Aug. 21.

20,000 Cubans in Angola alone

LONDON (Reuter) — About 20,000 Cubans and 2,500 East Germans serve with Angola's armed forces and operate aircraft and heavy equipment there, the International Institute for Strategic Studies says.

The independent London-based institute says in its annual report published today that some Portuguese also serve in Angola and there are several hundred Soviet advisers and technicians there.

The report says 16,000 to 17,000 Cubans and about 300 Warsaw pact technicians and advisers serve with Ethiopia's armed forces and operate aircraft and heavy equipment in the eastern African country.

The report on the 1979-80 military balance says Cuba also has given military aid to Congo, Guinea and Somalia.

Cubans in Angola also are training the country's armed forces and assisting with internal security.

The report, which coincides with the nonaligned summit conference in Havana, said Cuba appears to be withdrawing small numbers of troops from Africa but it gives no figures.

Soviet arms data 'threatens NATO'

LONDON (Reuter) — Continued Soviet deployment of its SS-20 intermediate range ballistic missiles will alter the balance of power substantially in favor of the Warsaw pact if NATO nuclear forces in Europe are not increased or modernized, the International Institute for Strategic Studies says.

In its annual report on the military balance, the institute said Moscow has about 120 SS-20 missiles in service. All deployed within range of Western European and the Middle Eastern targets, it says.

The SS-20 is a multiple independently-targetable re-entry vehicle (MIRV). It carries three warheads.

The report for 1979-80 says that in spite of the evolution of conventional forces in Europe, the over-all East-West balance continues to make military aggression unattractive, given the very high risks this would involve.

Turning to the Soviet naval power, the institute said there are reports a nuclear-powered cruiser of more than 20,000 tons is being fitted out in the Baltic.

The report says the new strategic arms limitation treaty, signed by U.S. President Carter and his Soviet counterpart Leonid Brezhnev in Vienna, Austria, in June, has the promise of achieving some reduction in the amount of strategic systems deployed.

But it is evident that capabilities of the superpowers would continue to increase despite the treaty.

At present, the United States has 1,054 intercontinental ballistic missiles while the Soviet Union has 1,398.

The report says it would be eight to 10 years before the United Stetes might restore a degree of invulnerability to its land-based deterrent forces by the introduction of a mobile system that might not be threatened by Soviet intercontinental missiles.

The report says that in other parts of the world, developing countries are expanding their capacity to produce military equipment under licences.

In Africa, the report says, many armies continue to acquire more modern equipment under the pressure of actual or potential conflicts.

Meanwhile, China is reported to be developing an intercontinental ballistic missile of 12,800-kilometre range and the first of these are probably operational, according to the report.

Cool weather quandary

GARDENING
Hilda Beastall

We look forward to many more lovely days of near summer weather but it is only natural that the nights will be less warm. This brings up the point whether plants in pots spending summer outside in a garden or on a balcony should now be brought indoors.

The weather change at the end of last week probably started the September move indoors, for it is better to be a little early than risk damage to tender leaves.

The plants suffer less harm if taken back indoors while windows and doors are still open freely, and certainly before the main heating system is on permanently.

Plants do not like shocks caused by sudden temperature and humidity changes. Outdoors there has been direct sunshine, free air circulation and a certain amount of humidity in the air from damp soil and, in gardens, from areas of grass and other leaf surfaces around the potted plants.

Indoors the humidity is low and if artificial heat is already started, it reduces it still more. The hot dry air is a double-barrelled shock to plants brought in from the outside.

The poinsettia can really stay out in a sunny sheltered place for another week or so unless a drop is forecast in night temperature. Then bring it into the coolest part of the house-or apartment where good daylight will reach during the day.

Night blackout for poinsettias begins at the end of September.

Tropical foliage plants with thin leaves such as Dieffenbackia, Maranta, Pilea and Coleus show dislike for strong wind coupled with a sharp drop in temperature. And large, heavy raindrops such as we noted at the weekend may tear a hole in the foliage even though the drops have no frozen core like hailstones.

Take in the little fibrous-rooted begonias with waxy leaves and dozens of small flowers. Give them a sunny window that is free from a draft of indoor heat from a radiator. They will continue blooming for weeks. Do not overwater; give only enough to keep soil damp but never wet.

Cacti and succulents do not mind cool temperatures if the soil is reasonably dry in their pots but they should be taken in before frost. Many are likely to show signs of bud formation this month in preparation for fall and winter blooms.

Each pot should be wiped off before taking indoors, to remove soil particles which may contain insect eggs. Look into drainage holes for earwigs and small slugs. You don't want these on plants in the house.

Also look over the leaves and stems of the plants for insects of any kind — woolly aphids, scale, and whatever may be hidden in a web holding the two edges of a leaf together. Remove all these little things by hand before taking the plants indoors. They will multiply rapidly at house temperatures.

These jobs are not difficult to do on a day or early evening when the weather doesn't make it an urgent matter for haste.

First prepare the place indoors where the plants are to go. Be sure there is space for each. The plants may be larger and there may be more of them by your propagation of them during summer.

Low benches by a glass door are a cooler spot than a normal table height at a conventional window sill. But avoid draughts of either cold or hot air on plants when in a room. The only plant that thrives on draughts is, or was, the Aspidistra, lovingly known as The Cast-Iron Plant in the days before central heating.

Today's plants for inside our homes are definitely less able to stand the casual treatment which we may inflict on them without being aware of their needs.

Four diamond facts to remember

When you are buying a diamond you want the best. We at Eaton's are here to help you find it. In choosing a valuable diamond, there are four main rules to remember.

Fact One is diamond weight. The weight is measured in carats. There are 100 points to a carat.

Fact Two is diamond cut. The more brilliant a diamond is, the more precise the cut.

Fact Three is diamond color. The closer it is to being colorless, the more valuable it is.

Fact Four is diamond clarity. A diamond with very minimal natural imperfections is more precious.

Building boom ignores slump

By ROBERT LINDSEY
New York Times

LOS ANGELES — In downtown Los Angeles, whose moribund condition was for years a source of jokes for talk show hosts, more than $700 million worth of office buildings, motels, apartment buildings and stores are either under construction or under contract to start within two years.

In Chicago, close to $1 billion worth of new office buildings, which will add more than eight million square feet of office space to the central city, are being built or are planned.

The central business districts of Houston, Denver, Dallas, Minneapolis, Philadelphia, Washington, Oakland and several other cities are also experiencing surges of construction that are not only altering urban skylines but are also challenging assumptions that big city centers are bound to decline.

The torrid pace of building, on the threshold of what some economists fear may be a national economic slump, worries some real estate men. They say that in some cities the building pace could produce a surplus of space similar to the one that left acres of unoccupied offices in New York, Los Angeles and several other cities after overbuilding in the early 1970s.

Nevertheless, agents and builders interviewed in several cities said that, while fears of a recession had caused a few proposed projects to be deferred, there had not been a wholesale cancellation of development.

Specialists cite several other factors for the burst of building activity, which follows a smaller surge last year. In most cities, they say, the most significant element has been a shortage of attractive office space; the rental market is tight, largely because of a sharp decrease in new construction after the overbuilding and recession in the early 70s.

As a result of tighter demand, landlords are increasing rents, often substantially; annual rents of $30 a square foot for office space are no longer a rarity in New York, for example.

Another aspect of the boom in many cities, experts say, is inflation psychology — the belief that even though construction costs have skyrocketed recently, costs are likely to rise still more.

Here in Los Angeles, a number of assumptions about big cities, and this city in particular, have been challenged by the recent wave of downtown expansion. In a mixture of truth and myth, Los Angeles has long been regarded as a city without a center — "seven suburbs in search of a city."

Probably more than any other large American city, it was tailored to the mobility of the automobile. In the years of its greatest growth after the Second World War, freeways, shopping centers and tract houses seemed to sprout from the flat Los Angeles basin like wild vegetation, and the central city decayed into a conglomeration of aging office buildings, tenement housing and a few prestigious department stores trying to resist the decay.

In the 1950s and 60s, downtown business interests eventually won one of the most emotional urban renewal battles of any city and demolished more than 4,500 old Victorian-style homes in a center city neighborhood called Bunker Hill.

Although some people here still argue that it was wrong to raze, rather than rehabilitate, this housing, the Bunker Hill area has become the heart of a redevelopment effort that has transformed the face of the city. Between 1966 and 1976, more than a dozen buildings valued at more than $1 billion were erected, giving the city its first vertical urban skyline and a sense of vibrancy that, at least during daytime hours, surprises many visitors.

'Undedication' set for 'art'

HURON, S.D. (UPI) — An "undedication" ceremony for a controversial sculpture outside the town's Federal Building is set for Sept. 8, says one of the leaders of a move to get rid of "Hoedown."

In early August, businessman Clifford Roth began a petition drive aimed at "getting rid of this monstrosity and changing the executive order which allowed them to put this here without our input."

"Hoedown," a $25,000 piece made of boiler plates and logs, was designed by Los Angeles artist Guy Dill as part of the $2 million Art in Architecture Program administered by the GSA.

But residents have been dissatisfied with "Hoedown" ever since it was unveiled in early July. They say they don't understand it — and want it removed.

Roth said he doesn't know if it's appropriate to hold an "undedication", but joked: "maybe we'll break out a bottle of the Uncola."

Downgraded David still packing hefty weather wallop

Times News Services

Hurricane David was downgraded to a tropical storm as it crept into South Carolina today after churning through Savannah.

However, centre officials said the storm still carried the threat of tornadoes, serious flooding and heavy squalls along the coast to the Cheapeake Bay and inland to the mountains of North Carolina and Virginia.

"We were very fortunate," Savannah Mayor John Rousakis said Tuesday after the hurricane, one of the worst killers storms of the century, moved away from this coastal city, leaving behind widespread but light damage.

David, which has claimed at least 900 lives, struck Savannah in its second slap at the U.S. mainland in two days. Heavy rains, high seas and anxiety spawned by the hurricane were blamed for at least seven deaths in Florida, Georgia and South Carolina.

Several thousand people, many of them afraid of looting if they evacuated, remained in their homes on the barrier islands off Georgia and South Carolina as the storm approached Tuesday.

Aftermath of hurricane David is shown in torn-up pavement

"The south side of the island is catching hell," Andy Dowell, a resident of Tybee Island off Savannahh, said in a telephone interview. "The ocean was just pounding at it. It is washing the seawall away. There are these 15-foot waves. They hit the seawall and explode about 30 feet up in the air. The waves are just beating the boards off of a house near the seawall."

In Savannah, David felled trees and power lines, blocking streets throughout the city, but there were no reports of destroyed homes or businesses.

Meanwhile, in San Juan, Puerto Rico, civil defence authorities today warned of severe flooding from tropical storm Frederic and appealed to all residents of low-lying areas to flee their homes to public shelters.

The National Weather Service reported flooding of rivers in the eastern Puerto Rican towns of Luquillo, Fajardo, and Ceiba and in Toa Baja, one of the worst hit towns by Hurricane David.

"The threat of dangerous and severe flooding will continue ... for Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands," for today, the service said.

Oil hike means hard winter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deputy Energy Secretary John O'Leary said today that many U.S. citizens might face "a cruel choice between food or heat" this winter because of a sharp increase in the price of home heating oil.

However, O'Leary told a congressional hearing that homeowners who heat with oil will have more than enough to get through the winter.

O'Leary said that the Carter administration soon will ask Congress for an additional $150 million, beyond the $250 million already appropriated, for energy assistance to low-income families to compensate for higher heating oil costs.

"There may be many people in our country who will be faced this winter with a cruel choice between food or heat," he said.

O'Leary testified as Congress returned to work after a four-week vacation, with energy issues once again in the spotlight.

He said consumers will pay at least 50 per cent more for heating oil this winter than they did last winter but added the administration has no plans to re-impose price controls on the fuel.

Legislators from cold-weather states have been skeptical of assurances that the U.S. will be able to meet Carter's goal of a 240-million-barrel fuel oil reserve by Oct. 1. They want officials to spell out exactly how such a reserve would be established.

The administration also will be asked to justify its decision to sell $47 million in kerosene and heating oil to Iran — fuel Iran's revolutionary government now says it may not need after all.

The president has justified the sale largely on humanitarian grounds.

But he has also noted that the two-million barrel, one-time export is small compared with the almost one million barrels of crude oil the U.S. imports from Iran each day.

Today's hearing on the sale to Iran was being conducted by energy-related subcommittees of the House commerce and government operations committees.

Alitalia decides to buy Boeings

ROME (AP) — A senior union official said today that Italy's flag airline Alitalia has decided to buy five Boeing 747 jetliners in place of the six McDonnell-Douglas DC-10s for which it cancelled a tentative order last month.

The statement was made by Luciano Mancini, secretary-general of one of the three principal unions of Transportation Workers. An Alitalia spokesman declined to comment but a source said the airline plans to make a statement before the end of the week.

The Italian government cancelled the deal with McDonnell-Douglas on August 24 after a DC-10 crashed in Chicago in May and the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration temporarily grounded all of the planes.

The union leader said Alitalia will pay $600 million for the five Boeing 747s, compared with $310 million for the six DC-10s.

Bishops' feud goes to synod

VATICAN CITY (AP) — The Vatican today confirmed that Pope John Paul has summoned feuding bishops from the Netherlands to Rome for an extraordinary synod next January to try to resolve differences in their ranks.

The meeting marks the first time that all seven bishops have been called to the Vatican together, says a Dutch church spokesman.

Vatican sources said the synod, scheduled to begin Jan. 14, will attempt to settle disputes over such issues as abortion, homosexuality and birth control. A Vatican announcement, confirming Dutch reports that such a meeting was planned, said simply that the synod would consider "ecclesiastical work in the Netherlands and examine the present status of pastoral activities."

There has been friction between traditional and progressive wings of the Dutch church since the mid-1960s. Bishop Gijsen of Roermond revived the debate recently by accusing some fellow churchmen of permissiveness.

The announcement said the pope made the decision in response to "the desire expressed during the past few months by the bishops of the country, especially Cardinal Johannes Willebrands, archbishop of Utrecht and president of the Dutch Bishops Conference."

The pontiff met separately in Rome with each of the seven Dutch bishops in recent months.

About 40 per cent of Holland's population of 14 million is Roman Catholic.

City approves Royal facelift

By NORMAN GIDNEY
Times Staff

Victoria aldermen Tuesday endorsed a report to restore the Royal Theatre — long the neglected orphan of the local cultural scene — as a top rank civic auditorium and centre for the performing arts.

The report calls for spending $2.3 million to restore and re-equip the original 1913 building and add extensions backstage and on the east side.

Ald. Ron McKenzie, the city's representative on the tri-municipal committee which runs the Royal, said financing remains to be arranged, but Westcoast Savings Credit Union has offered in writing to contribute and there are indications from Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis of substantial funding, perhaps 50 per cent.

The province helped out in the original 1975 purchase of the Royal from Famous Players with a one-third grant towards the $250,000 cost and has contributed towards the $1.8 million in neccessary basic repairs carried out since.

The report, written by local theatre figure Allan Purdy, requires approval from the other two owners, Oak Bay and Saanich.

But McKenzie said Oak Bay is very favorable and Saanich representative Ald. Howard Sturrock has endorsed the report 100 per cent.

"The Royal would become a major arts facility in western Canada," said Purdy.

Locally, it would take up the slack between the city-owned McPherson and the 1,300-seat University Centre.

The major recommendation is for a $750,000 glass-fronted, two-storey entrance foyer set back from the sidewalk on the parking lot east of the Royal, which the city bought last March. It would contain improved bar facilities and a larger lobby to handle capacity crowds in the 1,500-seat theatre.

The new foyer would also contain washrooms and cloakrooms and areas for community use such as receptions, public meetings, entertainment and so on, said McKenzie.

If the plan goes ahead, a 40-foot extension would be added at the back of the theatre on another city-owned parking lot at a cost of $200,000 for truck loading, scenery storage and workshops.

Some $400,000 would also be spent on further repairs to the roof, outside walls and the badly damaged terra cotta decoration on the front of the theatre.

Another $620,000 would pay for new lighting, a better sound system, new stage equipment and the furniture, fixtures and fittings necessary to service a refurbished building.

Purdy also strongly suggested the termination of Famous Players' lease to use the Royal as a movie house 301 days a year.

"An energetic and enlightened management could easily replace the lost income with new bookings that would substantially increase revenue," he said.

Boutiques and offices should be built along the west side of the theatre on Blanshard Street, with the revenue subsidizing theatre operations, said Purdy.

He also countered criticisms that what the capital region really needs is a good 2,500-seat auditorium, which is 1,000 more than the Royal. Purdy said such a hall would cost $11-$15 million to build and would create an operating deficit of $200,000 to $300,000 a year.

A renovated Royal could be self-financing.

And research indicates there are no more than a dozen travelling shows which now pass up Victoria because the city has no large hall.

To attract these events which now play Vancouver and Seattle, it was suggested that the Royal subsidize the needed $40,000 or $50,000 a year to make up the minimum gate proceeds.

'Lord Louis' buried as world mourns

Times News Services

LONDON — Earl Mountbatten of Burma, hero of one war and victim of another, was buried today as he planned it — among the pageantry he loved in a London filled with the saddest crowds since the death of Winston Churchill.

Queen Elizabeth, ashen-faced and dressed in black, led the assembly of royalty paying its last respects to Mountbatten, the World War II naval hero and statesman killed by an IRA bomb aboard his boat 10 days ago.

Although it was not the joyous occasion that Mountbatten once said he wanted his funeral to be, the spectacular procession from St. James' Palace to Westminster Abbey was just the way the 79-year-old earl planned it in a spoken obituary recorded two years ago.

Many thousands lined the route from the palace, where the coffin rested overnight, to the abbey, where Mountbatten's cousin Queen Elizabeth and his nephew Prince Philip led a dazzling gathering of six kings, three queens and many princes and princesses in paying final respects to Britain's beloved "Lord Louis."

On the theory that Mountbatten's Irish Republican Army assassins would stop at nothing, Scotland Yard turned the centre of London into an armed camp.

Some 4,000 police, armed detectives and terrorist specialists searched sewers, parked cars and buildings overlooking the funeral route. Sharpshooters on rooftops scanned the scene through binoculars.

Not since Sir Winston Churchill's funeral 14 years ago has Britain mounted a funeral of such magnificence.

In mid-morning of a lovely September day, hundreds of tall guardsmen, in crimson jackets and bearskin hats, began to line the streets. With a blare of trumpets and a ruffle of drums, the coffin was carried from the old redbrick palace of King

U.S. slams Soviets in Cuba

WASHINGTON (CP) — State Secretary Cyrus Vance said today the United States cannot tolerate the continued presence in Cuba of a Soviet combat brigade.

"We regard this (the Soviet presence) as a very serious matter, affecting our relations with the Soviet Union," Vance told a news conference. "The presence of this unit runs counter to long-held American policies."

Responding to questions, he added: "I will not be satisfied with the maintenance of the status quo."

Vance did not rule out the possibility that the situation might influence Senate action on the strategic arms limitation treaty with the Soviet Union.

Coffee prices rise

TORONTO (CP) — Coffee prices are going up for the fourth time in three months.

General Foods Ltd. announced Tuesday increases in the wholesale price of regular coffee by 25 cents a pound and instant coffee by 2.7 cents an ounce.

This rise brings the increase since June 6 to 75 cents a pound but the worst may be yet to come. Industry spokesman say frost damage in May reduced Brazil's expected 1980-81 coffee harvest by 23 per cent.

Frank Drea, Ontario minister of consumer and commercial relations, said the impact of the Brazilian frost won't be fully realized until next year.

The increase likely will be absorbed by restaurants for a while but retail stores can be expected to pass the increase on to customers.

"The increase would probably have to be passed on to the consumer, I really can't see any other way," said Allister Graham, general manager of the Oshawa Group's Ontario Food division.

$30,000-worth of ply stolen at Saanich lot

Saanich police are investigating the theft of about $30,000 worth of plywood from the Home Lumber yard at 470 Ardersier over the long weekend.

A police spokesman said today 30 bound bundles each consisting of between 40 to 80 sheets of select five-eights inch and three-quarter inch plywood were taken.

The theft occurred sometime between noon Saturday and Tuesday morning when lumber yard employees arrived back at work. A wire-mesh gate leading into the yard had been smashed open.

Police said a company fork lift was used to load the plywood onto a stolen 1975 Ford flatdeck truck.

The truck, with a yellow cab and marked Pacific Coast Roofing Ltd. on both doors, had been stolen from the roofing company's lot at 411 Hillside over the weekend. It was recovered in Saanich Tuesday morning.

Police said the truck could only carry about four bundles at a time and the thieves would have had to make at least seven trips into the yard.

Anyone who might have seen the truck over the weekend is asked to contract Sgt. Frank Briers or Sgt. Les Hughes of the Saanich police detectives branch at 388-4321.

Tuna trial Nov. 20

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tuna confiscated from nine American fish boats has been sold but the buyer hasn't decided yet what to do with it.

Meanwhile, the captains of the 11 American tuna boats seized last week southeast of the Queen Charlotte Islands appeared in Vancouver provincial court.

They were remanded to Nov. 20 for trial on charges of illegal fishing and unlawful entry into Canadian waters and were ordered to post $5,000 bond each for the release of their boats.

No pleas were entered.

All of the vessels are from Washington, Oregon and California.

Canadian Fishing Co. Ltd. paid $1,000 a ton for the 25 to 27 tons of albacore tuna, a fisheries spokesman said.

Money from the sales will be held pending the outcome of court cases involving the skippers of the boats.

Nine of the boats were brought to Vancouver, the others were taken to Port Alberni on Vancouver Island where their cargo of 2½ tons of tuna sold for $850 a ton.

Last month, eight American fishermen appeared in Victoria provincial court on charges of unauthorized entry into Canadian waters and were remanded to Feb. 13 for trial, and also ordered to post $5,000 bonds for the release of their boats.

Canada claims that all species of fish within its 200-mile limit are under its jurisdiction, but the U.S. doesn't recognize jurisdiction for highly migratory fish such as tuna.

In Washington meanwhile, tempers are rising over the seizure of U.S. boats. Times' Washington correspondent Claude Adams says the embargo on imports of Canadian tuna imposed by the U.S. State Department could escalate. See page 7 for his assessment of the situation.

New hope in ferry dispute

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Faltering ferry negotiations took a positive turn today when the ferry corporation officially agreed to the appointment of Clive McKee as an Industrial Inquiry Commission.

The union had already tentatively agreed to the move Tuesday when it asked that mediator Fred Geddes report out of the negotiations.

Unlike the appointment of a mediator, however, the establishment of a commission does not prevent the ferry workers from taking job action.

This leaves the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union free to begin striking Thursday.

McKee, a veteran labor mediator, has 14 days to bring both sides to some kind of settlement.

Failing an agreement within that time, he will report to Labor Minister Allan Williams with his recommendations on how he feels the dispute should be ended.

However, in labor circles, the appointment of an IIC is considered a serious step.

Sources in the ministry say commissions have a tremendous record of success.

The fact that both sides of the ferry dispute have agreed to this action is an encouraging sign that the dispute will be settled quickly and hopefully without job action, the sources say.

A marathon session Tuesday that involved the minister, mediator Geddes and both negotiating teams failed to reach an agreement and the union then asked that Geddes report out.

It will take a day or two for him to file his report to Williams.

When the minister officially informs both sides that he has received Geddes' report, it will free the union to take job action, barring other drastic measures from Williams.

The union served strike notice Aug. 22, but was unable to strike legally while the mediator was involved.

The establishment of an IIC while not preventing job action, may encourage the ferry workers to hold their fire during the commission's process.

The failure of the IIC to resolve the dispute still leaves a number of options open to the ministry, including the not-inconsiderable powers of the Essential Services Disputes Act.

Under this statute, the cabinet can order a 90-day cooling off period and/or the appointment of a special mediator.

If a cooling-off period is ordered, neither side is entitled to take any job action.

Ministry officials are hopeful the IIC will resolve the issue without implementing the essential services act.

Heat pump is cheaper than hydro or oil in the long run

Fuel bills leave you cold?

50-years old, the heat pump finally catching on in Victoria

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Looking for an alternative to your oil-guzzling furnace but reluctant to get into solar power, wood stoves or all-electric heating?

The answer might just be a heat pump, a 50-year-old invention that started coming into its own about the mid-1960s.

Well-known in the southwest U.S., they are finally coming into demand here in Victoria.

Last year one dealer sold 85 of them — worth more than $300,000 — to energy-minded islanders expecting to recover their costs within eight years.

The burden of chopping wood or converting a house to solar-assisted heating discourages a number of energy-conscious householders, particularly if they are not handymen.

And for most conventional homes, the cost of electric space heating can be even higher than ever-inflating oil.

Heat pumps are really nothing more than a refrigerator or air conditioning unit with a fancy name.

In fact, the heat pump is designed to heat a home in cool weather and air condition it in hot weather, using electricity in the most efficient way.

It needs no fossil fuel and its two electric motors, which run a compressor and an air circulating fan, draw power conservatively.

Why does a heat pump work without using fuel to create heat?

The answer is simple — the atmosphere outside a building has warmth that can be recovered by expending comparatively little energy.

But because the heat in the atmosphere is dissipated, a day when the temperature is about 40 F. will seem cool to anyone stepping out of a 68-degree house.

A heat pump, in effect, squeezes the heat from a large quantity of outside air and concentrates it inside a structure.

An efficient heat pump requires only one kilowatt of electrical energy to extract 2 kw of heat from the atmosphere.

Its effective working range is between 35 and 75 F, outdoors, ideal for Victoria's climate.

How much money does a heat pump save?

According to Foster Air Conditioning, a principal supplier on Vancouver Island, a heat pump installed in a typical 1,200-square-foot house will cost $4,500 to $5,000 or about twice the price of an oil furnace and 2½ times the cost of all-electric heating.

But because of its efficiency, it will use 40 per cent less electricity than that required to run conventional heating.

Gary Crawford of Brentwood installed a heat pump in his new house three years ago and is about to spend his fourth winter in economical, maintenance- and dirt-free comfort.

It's a big house with 2,400 square feet on each of two floors and it has lots of glass and 12- to 14-foot ceilings. Its windows are double-pane and the structure is insulated to recommended standard.

Crawford says his total electricity bill last year came to $707 — for hot water, furnace, lights and a much-used all-electric woodworking shop.

To heat the house all-electrically would cost $540 by B.C. Hydro's estimate, not counting lights, hot water and other electrical load. Crawford guesses the heating cost in his electricity bill is half the Hydro figure.

"I'm extremely happy with it," said Crawford, an electrical engineer for the defence department.

He estimates his home would have required two conventional oil furnaces as well as chimney flues and a massive oil tank that would have pushed the price well over $5,000.

But his installed price for the heat pump breaks down to $2,400 for the unit itself — including the supplementary heating element and fan — and $2,600 for air ducts.

Bud Stanley, an engineer employed by Foster, has conventional oil heating in his house and installed a heat pump in conjunction with it.

He found he used about 10 per cent less fuel the first year and expects more improvement with a full season of operation.

The add-on pump costs half a full installation and in most cases, requires no new ducting.

The heat pump's refrigerating coils and compressor are located outside where air can circulate freely past them as the refrigerant gas expands.

When compressed, the gas becomes hot and a feed line carries it inside the house to a radiator in the furnace where interior air is circulated through it and into the room ducts.

In reverse, the warm air inside is cooled when the refrigerant gas moving in the opposite direction expands in the furnace radiator and moves back outside to be recompressed.

The system works ideally as a heat source in exterior temperatures above 35 degrees F. There is a balance point at which the efficiency drops and conventional heating switches on automatically by thermostat.

A heat pump can be installed by a do-it-yourselfer at a potential saving of $200-$500 for a typical domestic unit.

Foster president Les Virag says self-installed projects are encouraged, provided the individual is competent and agrees to work under supervision in order to protect warranties.

Wrong impression on park: Kool

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis is ill-informed and giving the wrong impression about Royal Oak industrial park, according to the project's driving force, Art Kool.

Kool, who owns 22 residentially-zoned acres next to the proposed industrial zone, has been working for four months to get the project going.

He says he stands to gain nothing from his efforts but personal satisfaction.

And Kool says Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis' sudden public opposition to the project is shocking because it is unfounded.

Curtis hasn't even tried to investigate the issue and rebuffs all requests for a meeting, he claims.

"It hardly seems fair that one individual can kill it. It hardly seems like democracy to me."

Curtis says he will convey his oppostion to Highways Minister Alex Fraser, who must approve the project. Saanich submitted it last month and expects an answer by Sept. 10.

Kool says he has no qualms about building homes next to an industrial zone because the park will be attractive and quiet.

Almost all property in the designated industrial park area is unsuited for residential use. It is noisy and hemmed in by highways, he said.

The project has been scaled down and modified since the original 120 acre proposal. The actual industrial park is now about 59 acres.

Contrary to claims by Royal Oak Ratepayers Association, the road system is adequate to carry any increase in traffic, Kool says.

The industrial park will be almost completely surrounded by careful landscaping and a 50- to 100-foot-wide buffer zone of trees, Kool said.

All development costs will be paid by the industrial park property owners.

The industrial park should more accurately be described as a business park, Kool believes, because there will be no air or noise pollution and construction will be strictly controlled.

Access will be available only to "image-conscious" firms such as distribution, warehousing and moving and storage companies.

These companies will be servicing the Greater Victoria area and have no interest in settling at Keating Crossroad, as suggested by Curtis.

About seven companies are negotiating property purchases and two are ready to buy once the industrial zone is created, according to Kool.

At least one of those companies will locate in Nanaimo if the project falls through, he said.

And he swears only one of 26 residents inside the industrial park zone is opposed to it.

Joan Hudson, who lives on 2.62 treed acres inside the planned industrial zone doesn't want to sell, but lots of others do, according to Kool.

Hudson has been offered more than $200,000 for her property, he said, adding that he has personally spoken to every resident.

Some older residents are anxious to unload their land at a good price and move to the city, he said.

Lunar eclipse looking good

Greater Victoria residents will have an excellent view of the lunar eclipse Thursday if the weather is clear, says a spokesman for Dominion Astrophysical Observatory.

But viewers will have to get up in the middle of the night to see it.

The total eclipse begins at 3:31 a.m. Pacific Standard Time and ends at 4:17 a.m.

The eclipse can be watched directly without fear of eye damage.

At that time me the moon will move within Earth's shadow. It will be the last total lunar eclipse visible from North America until 1982.

Easterners will not be able to see the moon completely in Earth's shadow because the moon will be setting and the sun rising before the end of the eclipse.

When Earth's shadow covers the moon, it appears as a rusty ball. It is never completely dark because rays of sunlight are bent by Earth's atmosphere and enter the shadow.

The last total lunar eclipse visible in most of Canada was in 1975. A total eclipse was visible from the extreme northwest part of North America in 1978.

Prison liquor caches seized at Jordan River

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

Corrections officials are stepping up searches for liquor caches and homebrew stills at the Jordan River minimum security corrections camp seven miles west of Jordan River.

Guards Sunday found a cache of booze in the bush near a camp building and Sooke RCMP officers confiscated several cases of beer being brought in by visitors.

The cache consisted of two bottles of liquor and a canister of Tang mixed with some as yet unknown drug.

A small batch of homebrew was also found Monday night above a furnace and two weeks ago guards came across the remnants of a homebrew supply hidden in the bushes.

Guards fear a repeat of an incident in April, 1978 when inmates, drunk on homebrew, went on a rampage, burning down the camp's gym and causing more than $100,000 damage.

Acting director Frank Jamieson, second-in-charge at the camp — director Bill Dyke is on vacation — said today searches of visitors' vehicles will be increased.

Up to now, such searches have been made randomly every four to six weeks. In future they'll be made every week or two.

Jamieson said it is almost impossible to prevent inmates from getting their hands on booze.

The camp, able to accommodate a maximum of 40 inmates, is situated in a forest clearing overlooking Juan de Fuca Strait and has no fence around its perimeter.

Because of the fairly open access and the lack of sufficent staff to monitor the activities of all inmates, drinking has been a constant problem since the camp opened in 1975.

"Inmates here are supposed to be on own behavior," said Jamieson. "It's left up to themselves for discipline. But sometimes the guys get carried away."

He said staff is always coming across small caches of liquor and stills tucked away in the woods, underneath buildings or secreted in furnace panels in trailers.

Often great ingenuity is used in planning stills. The one found following the April, 1978 incident was located under a floor board in a tool shed.

A tunnel had been dug out and a hose covered with earth led off to a nearby creek to carry away the smell of the potent mixture of rice and raisons brewing in a vat. The brew tested out at 13 per cent alcohol or three times the strength of beer.

Just about anything is used to make homebrew, he said. Favorites are tomato juice, canned fruit, rice and bread for yeast.

Guards have tried to bring the problem under control. Sugar now is kept under lock and key in the office and dispensed at the rate of five pounds a day.

Orders for food are checked regularly but because inmates are responsible for the kitchen and all food preparation, it is fairly easy to build up an inventory of brew-making supplies.

Jamieson said greater control could be achieved if there was a food control officer as there is at Wilkinson Road or Oakalla.

But even that wouldn't be the complete solution because the officer would only be at the camp seven hours a day, four days a week.

Jamieson said the drinking problem is something corrections officer are almost forced to live with.

Strike plan called off for lacrosse games

The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers today said it has temporarily called off strike plans and will return to the bargaining table Monday.

The announcement ends the threat of a walkout which could have interfered with the Mann Cup lacrosse series.

"This is the first Mann Cup lacrosse series in Victoria in 22 years and we don't want to interfere with something as important to the community as that," said IBEW local business agent John Zettler.

The union is in a legal position to strike at any time but has agreed to withhold any action until after next week's round of talks.

The union and the city agreed to resume negotiations at 11 a.m. Monday.

Even if the talks are stalemated Monday, there would be no picket line action against the lacrosse series, Zettler said.

The fifth, sixth and seven games in the series, if necessary, are scheduled for Monday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

Athough there are only 15 IBEW electricians employed by the city, a picket line would be honored by the large local of the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

Potential strike targets are Victoria city hall and the Johnson Street bridge where electricians are carrying out renovations.

Odds favor ticket dodgers

Got stung with a parking ticket recently and haven't got around to paying it yet?

Stall a little longer — the odds are favorable that the city might not catch up to present a bill.

A newspaper report from Vancouver on the weekend said hundreds of parking tickets are being cancelled there every month because the offending motorists can't be found or the provincial sheriff's office hasn't the time to deliver the necessary summons.

In a smaller way, it's the same in Victoria.

City comptroller Mason Sheldrick told council last month that there are 3,895 summonses relating to traffic fines which couldn't be delivered in the first six months of 1979.

Most were returned by the post office because the person moved and left no forwarding address. Some 1,587 summonses were returned as undeliverable by the sheriff's office.

Additionally, the city still has 1,768 summonses from 1978 making a total of 5,663 traffic fines ignored by drivers and a loss of revenue to the city of $56,630.

"It's not a lot when you take the percentage. We're issuing 125,000-plus tickets a year," said Roy Stewart of the city comptroller's office.

Traffic fines which were paid netted Victoria a total of $358,519 last year.

"The only thing that rankles me is these people are beating it and the honest guys are paying the fines," he added.

A motorist may escape paying, he said, but the city keeps the summonses in an active file.

You have seven calendar days to pay your basic parking fine, after that the $3 increases to $10. Ten dollar fines remain that after the week's deadline passes. Then the city sends out a form letter with a photocopy of the ticket.

If there is still no response, a summons is issued. The city waits about a month before taking this step because of the time and paperwork involved. An information has to be sworn by a police officer before a justice of the peace.

Next step is to get a bench warrant in provincial court for the physical arrest by police.

As an example, on Aug. 13, Stewart said, a dozen orders for warrants went out involving 36 tickets.

All of this is done in chasing offenders who can be traced. The summonses for those who can't be located go into a backlog at city hall.

If a new address turns up for a driver, Stewart sends the original summons over to city police to serve. But most of the backlog can't be worked on for lack of time and staff.

Sheldrick proposed that the city hire a temporary summons server for two months at a cost of $4,500 to clear it away.

Q. How old is the Canadian Teachers' Federation? M.B.

A. Four teachers, meeting in Winnipeg, conceived the idea of a federation for the western provinces in 1919. At an organization meeting in Calgary on July 19, 1920, two representatives from Ontario were also present and it was suggested support would also come from Quebec and the Maritime provinces. In view of this the Canadian Teachers' Federation was formed with an initial membership of about 9,000.

Q. Can you tell me when Canadians first began competing in the famous Bisley rifle-shooting competitions at Bisley in England?

Three years for brutal $5 robbery

A 19-year-old Saanich man was sentenced in county court Monday to three years in the penitentiary for what both prosecution and defence agreed was a vicious and brutal attack on an 83-year-old woman.

Kelly Norman Lambert was given the same sentence as Wesley James Kennedy, 19, who also pleaded guilty earlier to robbery with violence before a different judge.

Judge Montague Drake said Monday the Dec. 3 incident was savage and if the offender was not so young would have resulted in a heavy sentence. He said he hoped that Lambert's maturing since the offence will continue.

Crown counsel Nicholas Lang said both men entered the Victoria West home of Julia Knoll late at night. She surprised them and they attacked her, breaking facial bones and kicking her in the face. Three to five dollars were taken.

Mrs. Knoll, asthmatic, diabetic and with a heart condition, was confined to hospital for 18 days. Her health has since degenerated to the point where if there had been a trial in July, she could not have testified. While this was undoubtedly due to her age, it was also due to her ordeal, he said.

Victoria is a community with a great many defenceless older people who must be protected, Lang said.

Defence counsel Dermod Owen-Flood said it was one of the most vicious and brutal crimes committed in Victoria but the question before the court was whether the sentence should be more than three years, three years, or less than three.

He argued in favor of a definite sentence of two years less one day and an indeterminate sentence for a longer period with conditions.

He submitted a psychiatric report which concluded Lambert is non-aggressive, easily influenced, not likely to repeat the offence and has the potential for being a well-behaved citizen.

He called seven character witnesses to support these opinions as well as Lambert himself.

Owen-Flood noted that Lambert has spent seven months in custody and told the court alcohol, drugs and bad companions are Lambert's problem.

He asked that he not be sent to the penitentiary which he called a finishing school for the worse.

City approves Royal facelift

By NORMAN GIDNEY
Times Staff

Victoria aldermen Tuesday endorsed a report to restore the Royal Theatre — long the neglected orphan of the local cultural scene — as a top rank civic auditorium and centre for the performing arts.

The report calls for spending $2.3 million to restore and re-equip the original 1913 building and add extensions backstage and on the east side.

Ald. Ron McKenzie, the city's representative on the tri-municipal committee which runs the Royal, said financing remains to be arranged, but Westcoast Savings Credit Union has offered in writing to contribute and there are indications from Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis of substantial funding, perhaps 50 per cent.

The province helped out in the original 1975 purchase of the Royal from Famous Players with a one-third grant towards the $250,000 cost and has contributed towards the $1.8 million in necessary basic repairs carried out since.

The report, written by local theatre figure Allan Purdy, requires approval from the other two owners, Oak Bay and Saanich.

But McKenzie said Oak Bay is very favorable and Saanich representative Ald. Howard Sturrock has endorsed the report 100 per cent.

"The Royal would become a major arts facility in western Canada," said Purdy.

Locally, it would take up the slack between the city-owned McPherson and the 1,300-seat University Centre.

The major recommendation is for a $750,000 glass-fronted, two-storey entrance foyer set back from the sidewalk on the parking lot east of the Royal, which the city bought last March. It would contain improved bar facilities and a larger lobby to handle capacity crowds in the 1,500-seat theatre.

The new foyer would also contain washrooms and cloakrooms and areas for community use such as receptions, public meetings, entertainment and so on, said McKenzie.

If the plan goes ahead, a 40-foot extension would be added at the back of the theatre on another city-owned parking lot at a cost of $200,000 for truck loading, scenery storage and workshops.

Some $400,000 would also be spent on further repairs to the roof, outside walls and the badly damaged terra cotta decoration on the front of the theatre.

Another $620,000 would pay for new lighting, a better sound system, new stage equipment and the furniture, fixtures and fittings necessary to service a refurbished building.

Purdy also strongly suggested the termination of Famous Players' lease to use the Royal as a movie house 301 days a year.

"An energetic and enlightened management could easily replace the lost income with new bookings that would substantially increase revenue," he said.

Boutiques and offices should be built along the west side of the theatre on Blanshard Street, with the revenue subsidizing theatre operations, said Purdy.

He also countered criticisms that what the capital region really needs is a good 2,500-seat auditorium, which is 1,000 more than the Royal. Purdy said such a hall would cost $11-$15 million to build and would create an operating deficit of $200,000 to $300,000 a year.

A renovated Royal could be self-financing.

And research indicates there are no more than a dozen travelling shows which now pass up Victoria because the city has no large hall.

To attract these events which now play Vancouver and Seattle, it was suggested that the Royal subsidize the needed $40,000 or $50,000 a year to make up the minimum gate proceeds.

'Lord Louis' buried as world mourns

Times News Services

LONDON — Earl Mountbatten of Burma, hero of one war and victim of another, was buried today as he planned it — among the pageantry he loved in a London filled with the saddest crowds since the death of Winston Churchill.

Queen Elizabeth, ashen-faced and dressed in black, led the assembly of royalty paying its last respects to Mountbatten, the World War II naval hero and statesman killed by an IRA bomb aboard his boat 10 days ago.

Although it was not the joyous occasion that Mountbatten once said he wanted his funeral to be, the spectacular procession from St. James Palace to Westminster Abbey was just the way the 79-year-old earl planned it in a spoken obituary recorded two years ago.

Many thousands lined the route from the palace, where the coffin rested overnight, to the abbey, where Mountbatten's cousin Queen Elizabeth and his nephew Prince Philip led a dazzling gathering of six kings, three queens and many princes and princesses in paying final respects to Britain's beloved "Lord Louis."

On the theory that Mountbatten's Irish Republican Army assassins would stop at nothing, Scotland Yard turned the centre of London into an armed camp.

Some 4,000 police, armed detectives and terrorist specialists searched sewers, parked cars and buildings overlooking the funeral route. Sharpshooters on rooftops scanned the scene through binoculars.

Not since Sir Winston Churchill's funeral 14 years ago has Britain mounted a funeral of such magnificence.

In mid-morning of a lovely September day, hundreds of tall guardsmen, in crimson jackets and bearskin hats, began to line the streets. With a blare of trumpets and a ruffle of drums, the coffin was carried from the old red brick palace of King

Tories to split Petro-Can

OTTAWA (CP) — The Conservative government announced today it will keep its interest in certain key sections of Petro-Canada, the state oil company, while turning over other company assets to the private sector.

The long-awaited and bound to be controversial announcement was immediately denounced by Ed Broadbent, leader of the New Democratic Party, who pledged to introduce a motion of non-confidence when Parliament resumes in October.

Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn told a news conference: "The government's intention is to see a significant proportion of the assests of Petro-Canada returned to the private sector."

However, other roles, such as the negotiation of state-to-state oil contracts, the promotion of exploration in frontier areas and the promotion of development of tar sands and heavy oils projects should remain with the government, he said.

Coffee prices rise

TORONTO (CP) — Coffee prices are going up for the fourth time in three months.

General Foods Ltd. announced Tuesday increases in the wholesale price of regular coffee by 25 cents a pound and instant coffee by 2.7 cents an ounce.

This rise brings the increase since June 6 to 75 cents a pound but the worst may be yet to come. Industry spokesman say frost damage in May reduced Brazil's expected 1980-81 coffee harvest by 23 per cent.

Frank Drea, Ontario minister of consumer and commercial relations, said the impact of the Brazilian frost won't be fully realized until next year.

The increase likely will be absorbed by restaurants for a while but retail stores can be expected to pass the increase on to customers.

"The increase would probably have to be passed on to the consumer, I really can't see any other way," said Allister Graham, general manager of the Oshawa Group's Ontario Food division.

$30,000-worth of ply stolen at Saanich lot

Saanich police are investigating the theft of about $30,000 worth of plywood from the Home Lumber yard at 470 Ardersier over the long weekend.

A police spokesman said today 30 bound bundles each consisting of between 40 to 80 sheets of select five-eights inch and three-quarter inch plywood were taken.

The theft occurred sometime between noon Saturday and Tuesday morning when lumber yard employees arrived back at work. A wire-mesh gate leading into the yard had been smashed open.

Police said a company fork lift was used to load the plywood onto a stolen 1975 Ford flatdeck truck.

The truck, with a yellow cab and marked Pacific Coast Roofing Ltd. on both doors, had been stolen from the roofing company's lot at 411 Hillside over the weekend. It was recovered in Saanich Tuesday morning.

Police said the truck could only carry about four bundles at a time and the thieves would have had to make at least seven trips into the yard.

Anyone who might have seen the truck over the weekend is asked to contract Sgt. Frank Briers or Sgt. Les Hughes of the Saanich police detectives branch at 388-4321.

Tuna trial Nov. 20

VANCOUVER (CP) — Tuna confiscated from nine American fish boats has been sold but the buyer hasn't decided yet what to do with it.

Meanwhile, the captains of the 11 American tuna boats seized last week southeast of the Queen Charlotte Islands appeared in Vancouver provincial court.

They were remanded to Nov. 20 for trial on charges of illegal fishing and unlawful entry into Canadian waters and were ordered to post $5,000 bond each for the release of their boats.

No pleas were entered.

All of the vessels are from Washington, Oregon and California.

Canadian Fishing Co. Ltd. paid $1,000 a ton for the 25 to 27 tons of albacore tuna, a fisheries spokesman said.

Money from the sales will be held pending the outcome of court cases involving the skippers of the boats.

Nine of the boats were brought to Vancouver, the others were taken to Port Alberni on Vancouver Island where their cargo of 2½ tons of tuna sold for $850 a ton.

Last month, eight American fishermen appeared in Victoria provincial court on charges of unauthorized entry into Canadian waters and were remanded to Feb. 13 for trial, and also ordered to post $5,000 bonds for the release of their boats.

Canada claims that all species of fish within its 200-mile limit are under its jurisdiction, but the U.S. doesn't recognize jurisdiction for highly migratory fish such as tuna.

In Washington meanwhile, tempers are rising over the seizure of U.S. boats. Times' Washington correspondent Claude Adams says the embargo on imports of Canadian tuna imposed by the U.S. State Department could escalate. See page 7 for his assessment of the situation.

New hope in ferry dispute

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Faltering ferry negotiations took a positive turn today when the ferry corporation officially agreed to the appointment of Clive McKee as an Industrial Inquiry Commission.

The union had already tentatively agreed to the move Tuesday when it asked that mediator Fred Geddes report out of the negotiations.

Unlike the appointment of a mediator, however, the establishment of a commission does not prevent the ferry workers from taking job action.

This leaves the B.C. Ferry and Marine Workers Union free to begin striking Thursday.

McKee, a veteran labor mediator, has 14 days to bring both sides to some kind of settlement.

Failing an agreement within that time, he will report to Labor Minister Allan Williams with his recommendations on how he feels the dispute should be ended.

However, in labor circles, the appointment of an IIC is considered a serious step.

Sources in the ministry say commissions have a tremendous record of success.

The fact that both sides of the ferry dispute have agreed to this action is an encouraging sign that the dispute will be settled quickly and hopefully without job action, the sources say.

A marathon session Tuesday that involved the minister, mediator Geddes and both negotiating teams failed to reach an agreement and the union then asked that Geddes report out.

It will take a day or two for him to file his report to Williams.

When the minister officially informs both sides that he has received Geddes' report, it will free the union to take job action, barring other drastic measures from Williams.

The union served strike notice Aug. 22, but was unable to strike legally while the mediator was involved.

The establishment of an IIC while not preventing job action, may encourage the ferry workers to hold their fire during the commission's process.

The failure of the IIC to resolve the dispute still leaves a number of options open to the ministry, including the not-inconsiderable powers of the Essential Services Disputes Act.

Under this statute, the cabinet can order a 90-day cooling off period and/or the appointment of a special mediator.

If a cooling-off period is ordered, neither side is entitled to take any job action.

Ministry officials are hopeful the IIC will resolve the issue without implementing the essential services act.
